SURVIVOR DESCRIBES SHOOTING

Gunman Tried To Bargain

VANCOUVER (CP) — A gunman tried to bargain for his freedom before he opened fire on three captives in a room at the luxurious Bayshore Inn, the sole surviving member of the trio said today.

Paul Egley, Pan American Airline executive, said the gunman covered him and fraud squad detective Larry Short, 42, and Bayshore assistant manager Laurence Kingston, 34, with a gun and said:

"What would you do to let me out of here without following me?"

Egley said Detective Short replied: "We won't follow you."

A second later Egley said he heard the gunman say: "What are you doing?"

Then shooting started. When it was over, Short and Kingston lay fatally shot and the man with the gun had run from the room holding an abdominal gunshot wound. Egley was wounded in the thigh.

The man police identified as Eric Lifton, 21, of Lake Monomack, N.H., was captured outside the hotel after forcing a police constable into a taxi.

The policeman fought and overpowered him to end the affray Friday.

TWO COUNTS

Lifton, in hospital, was charged with two counts of capital murder.

Egley said he followed Short and Kingston to the man's room in connection with an airline credit card investigation. When he entered, the detective was questioning the man.

"It was a very calm discussion then," Egley said.

The airline executive said he went to make a telephone call when Short "took me by the arm and said 'the guy's got a gun.'"

"I turned around and he sure did have a gun and it was pointing right at me. He seemed nervous but there was no expression at all on his face."

"He pointed the gun at his own temple and said 'I could do this, but I'd rather do it this way.'"

FACE DOWN

"Then he made us lie face down on the floor on one side of the room. He was standing about 15 feet from us."

It was at this point, Egley said, that the bargaining took place, followed by the gunman's sudden question: "What are you doing?"

"Then all hell broke loose. I couldn't tell who started. Continued on Page 3

GERMANS JAIL ENGINEER AS SOVIET SPY

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (Reuters) — The West German federal high court today sentenced Soviet engineer Valentin A. Pripolzev to four years hard labor on a charge of spying.

Pripolzev, 43, was employed by the Soviet trade mission in Cologne when he was arrested last August. He is the first Russian citizen tried by the high court. He denied the charges after the court rejected his claim of diplomatic immunity when the trial began here Wednesday.

Exchange Made On Berlin Bridge

BERLIN (AP) — U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers was exchanged today for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel in a hush-hush operation on a Berlin bridge.

Soon afterward Powers flew off to Washington.

Informed sources said the exchange was held up for about 20 minutes while a check was made to confirm the release of a second American in the exchange — Frederick L. Pryor, 28-year-old economics student held by the East Germans.

Then the exchange of Powers for Abel was made in the centre of Glienicke Bridge in the Berlin suburb of Wannsee.

In Washington, the White House announced Powers was due in the U.S. capital either today or Sunday but said the place and time will not be disclosed.

SEE FAMILY FIRST

Press secretary Pierre Salinger advised reporters they would not be given an opportunity to interview the spy plane pilot for 10 days or two weeks. This is to give Powers an opportunity to see his family and be interviewed by government officials, Salinger said.

He added in response to questions that there is no charge against Powers and he is not in custody.

Powers had been held by the Russians since his capture in reconnaissance plane crashed deep in the Soviet Union on May Day in 1960. He was sentenced the following Aug. 19 to 10 years confinement for espionage.

Abel, a colonel in the Soviet intelligence service, was sentenced to 30 years in 1957. Pryor, who had been held since he vanished on a visit to East Berlin Aug. 25, was released at checkpoint Charlie, the K.S. crossing point in West Berlin.

'Desire To Improve Relations'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said today one of the reasons U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers was released was a desire to improve relations with the United States.

A brief announcement on Moscow radio also said Powers had been released in response to pleas from his relatives.

It said the decision to release Powers, sentenced to a 10-year term Aug. 19, 1960, was made by the presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

The announcement made no mention of Col. Rudolf Abel, the Soviet spy who was exchanged for Powers.

account of the secret exchange of Powers for Abel.

Just before 8 a.m. about 10 Americans arrived at Glienicke Bridge. They rode in German-made cars bearing licence plates issued to private cars of U.S. civilians in Germany.

It was just before dawn. The Americans wore civilian clothes and overcoats. In the group, apparently, was Abel.

LINE DIVIDES BORDER

The Americans parked their cars off the bridge, and walked about 75 yards to the middle. There a white line marks the border between West Berlin and Soviet-occupied East Germany.

Forum on Cancer For Women Only

British Columbia's pioneering cytology program for early detection of cancer of the cervix will be explained at a free forum for women only in the Odeon Theatre on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There will be no reserved seats. The theatre will be filled on a first come, first served basis.

A film, "Time and Two Women," will be shown. It will present the vital message that, by means of a simple annual examination, cervix cancer can be virtually eliminated.

After the film there will be a question and answer period with a panel of four doctors taking part: Dr. H. K. Fidler, Vancouver, specialist in pathology and bacteriology; Dr. David Boyes, Vancouver, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology; Dr. Arthur B. Nash, Victoria, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology; and Dr. D. B. Roxburgh, specialist in pathology and bacteriology.

The forum is sponsored by The Victoria Times and B.C. Cancer Institute.

Figures just released by Dr. Fidler, who is director of the cytology laboratory at the institute, show that the uterine tests taken from nearly 85,000 women during a recent 12-month period resulted in detection of 217 proven cases of early carcinoma of the cervix.

Figures are based on a 12-month period ending Sept. 30, 1961, since it requires some four months to verify preliminary findings.

Discovered at this stage, cancer of the cervix is almost 100 per cent curable. At later stages, it is only about 50 per cent curable.

Mother, 2 Daughters Perish in B.C. Blaze

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Dorothy Lyons, 23, and her two daughters, aged two and four, died in their smoke-filled home at nearby North Kamloops today.

The family dog also perished as fire broke out in the living room and burned slowly through the floor. That was the only damage.

Milkman Hank Jongerhuis said he saw smoke coming from the house at 6.15 a.m. and turned in an alarm, he then smashed a window and lifted the bodies of the children outside.

Firemen found Mrs. Lyons' body on the floor of the front bedroom. She is believed to have attempted to escape. Gilbert Lyons, her husband, was not at home at the time.

HECTIC WEDDING DAY

They Hope Next One Will Elope

ALGONA, Iowa (AP) — When Gwen Egel and James Kildow were married here at most everything went awry.

At a wedding rehearsal last Saturday night the bride's party was an hour late. Monday was the wedding day. Kildow thought he had plenty of time to get a haircut and Miss Egel planned to line up a photographer.

The barbershop and the photographic studio were closed. Finally a barber and photographer were rounded up.

The ceremony was to be a double-ring affair, but the jeweler didn't get them completed in time. Miss Egel's mother lent her a ring.

The couple then found they had a wedding permit but no licence. A check with a doctor revealed the results of their blood tests had been lost in the mail.

Miss Egel's father drove 55 miles to Mason City to get the blood test results. On the way he was charged with failure to dim his car lights properly.

The blood test papers finally in hand, Miss Egel and Kildow went to a court clerk at 7 p.m. for their marriage licence.

Guests were assembling in the church when the minister found Miss Egel in tears in his study. She had dropped her wedding gown in the mud. She had to wash the muddy part in a sink and then iron the dress.

The ceremony finally got

Fat Pay Cheque Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francis Gary Powers, the U-2 pilot, apparently will find a lot of money awaiting him on his return from Russian captivity.

Powers testified at his Moscow spy trial that his contract called for $2,500 a month, or $30,000 a year.

He did not make clear with whom he had the contract, but after his arrest he was identified as a Lockheed Aircraft Corporation test pilot assigned to the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

It is now more than 21 months since Powers' plane came down in Russia. Twenty-one months at $2,500 a month is $52,500.

Financial Giants Fight For Power Corp. Control

A battle for financial control of the British Columbia Power Corporation is shaping up in the stock markets of Eastern Canada, it was reported in business circles there today.

In what was described as the largest single deal ever traded on a stock exchange in Canada, a Toronto group acquired $1,600,000 of B.C. Power shares ($100,000 at $16).

The group is headed by E. B. Kernaghan, president of Thomson, Kernaghan and Company, a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Sources on Bay Street — the Toronto financial centre — are quoted as saying Mr. Kernaghan's group is seeking control of the company because it is dissatisfied with the way B.C. Power management has handled the firm's affairs since the B.C. government expropriated the B.C. Electric Company, its chief subsidiary, last August.

SEEK BETTER DEAL

The group is said to feel it could work out a better arrangement for B.C. Power shareholders if it could sit down and bargain with Premier Bennett.

Under the takeover scheme, the government paid B.C. Power $111,000,000 for all the common shares of B.C. Electric.

Meantime, B.C. Power distributed part of the money it received from the government to its shareholders in December at a figure of $18.50 per share.

The reduced shares have been trading in the $15 to $16 range since that time.

In addition to the big trade Friday, B.C. Power has been a top trader at Toronto for more than a week, with the price edging up slightly from $15.50 mark to a close of $16.14 Friday.

This may have indicated other heavy buying by the group seeking control.

To acquire control it is said the new group would have to acquire more shares than the Power Corporation of Canada, a holding and management company which at June 30 last held $7,300,000 worth of B.C. Power shares.

Friday's 100,000 share block represents about 2.1 per cent of B.C. Power's 4,772,011 outstanding shares. But it represents also about one-fifth as much as Power Corporation of Canada's holdings.

While B.C. Power still has a considerable period in which to exercise its option with the government to complete the sale at $38 per share, its line of action has been to launch a strong campaign against the takeover method and seek an arbitration in the courts. It claims the company's assets are worth some $50,000,000.

Pay Boost News Welcomed By Civil Service Leaders

Premier Bennett's announcement of a pay increase for B.C. civil servants was welcomed today by Norman T. Richards, president of the Victoria branch, B.C. Government Employees' Association.

"Any increase is welcome with wages as low as they are," said Mr. Richards. "I do not care to comment further until we know how the increases will be allocated."

In Vancouver, Ab Kemp, director of education for the BCGE, noted that this is the first general pay boost for B.C. civil servants since 1959.

"We are pleased that Premier Bennett has recognized our request for a salary increase," he said. "But the sum announced in the budget does not appear to be sufficient to cover the amount we requested—about $4,000,000."

"We will have to wait for a report from the Civil Service Commission next week to see how the money is to be allocated."

Premier Bennett in his budget speech Friday said a total of $2,775,000 has been allocated for increases in salaries paid to government employees.

At a recent service club luncheon George Gregory jocularly backed up his well-known political beliefs with cold cash.

The club's policeman was firing various members for alleged misdemeanors committed during the past week. Coming to Harry Savage, he said, "And you Harry...are docked 10c for sleeping during Mr. Bennett's speech aboard My Victoria last Saturday."

Before Harry could reach into his pocket, Gregory had already leaped to his feet, tossed two dimes in the fine box and could be heard exclaiming: "Good stuff, good stuff, just what we need more of."

While it may be questionable whether Ald. Lily Wilson got the last word in an argument with Ald. Geoffrey Edge- low over closing Mountain View Home, one thing is certain today: she has a "lost" voice.

She lost her voice and went down with a cold following a heated campaign this week to have the building closed.

The B.C. budget was knocked out of the late edition headlines Friday by the double shooting in Vancouver.

Last time crime stole the spotlight from the budget was 15 years ago, when two police officers and a bank robber were shot dead in a grim battle outside the Great Northern Railway roundhouse at False Creek, Vancouver.

Finance minister at that time was Herbert Anscomb.

Sir Cullum and Lady Welch will reach Victoria in time for the annual Victoria Day celebrations, May 21.

Confirmation of their visit was given Mayor R. B. Wilson Friday by J. V. Fisher, B.C. agent-general in London.

Partner in a Vancouver downtown motel enterprise is former Victorian Bernie Kinsman.

Born and raised here, he returned to the Island from a sales job to take training at Royal Roads in 1940. He and his father had built the Tudor House in 1932, but it was sold in 1955.

The Vancouver motel will be called the Kingsway. It will contain 75 rooms, a heated swimming pool, and parking for 300 cars.

Several times a week in the Times there appears a list of winners in some tournament or other conducted by the Victoria unit of the American Contract Bridge League.

Quite apart from the fact that they apparently hold a "tournament" every two days, the same names appear every single time.

Either these people are so good they win every time or we are being sent a list of the entire membership of the VUOTACBL.

Dangers to Canada In ECM 'Overrated'

Dangers of the European Common Market to the Canadian economy have been over-rated, Dr. G. R. Elliott of Victoria College said Thursday night.

He and a panel of three other economists agreed that the ECM's effect on Canada's export market will be less damaging than is commonly feared.

The discussion took place at a meeting sponsored by the New Democratic Party in the Newstead Hall.

Dr. Alfred Carlson, associate professor of economics at the panel.

Prof. C. S. Burchill was moderator of the panel.

WCB Appeal Judgment Reserved

The B.C. Appeal Court reserved judgment here Friday on the appeal of a Nanaimo painter against a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board refusing his application for a disability pension.

Robert C. Kinnaird, a Nanaimo painter, asked the appeal court to set aside a judgment of Mr. Justice T. W. Brown in Supreme Court upholding the board's decision.

Kinnaird contracted recurrent eczema while working with a sealer paint in a Nanaimo shipyard in 1944.

CONDITION CHRONIC

His counsel, Tom Berger, said he was dropped from compensation by the board in 1947, but his condition became chronic and he applied for a pension on grounds of a permanent partial disability.

During the hearing Mr. Berger mentioned that B.C. miner Louis Battaglia has been trying for five years to prove himself entitled to a pension because of silicosis.

He suggested the Battaglia appeal might be a counterpart to that of Kinnaird.

The appeal court reserved judgment after hearing from C. C. Locke, Q.C. representing the Workmen's Compensation Board.

SOCCER RACE TIGHTENS

'Spurs Gain On Leaders

LONDON (AP) — Bobby Smith, former England centre-forward, scored in the 37th minute to help Tottenham Hotspur to a 4-2 win over Nottingham Forest today.

It was Smith's first league game since early in the English League soccer season. He lost his form and had been playing in Tottenham's reserve team.

The win narrowed the gap between Tottenham and Burnley, the First Division leader. Burnley, held to a 2-2 tie at Everton, has 38 points from 26 games. Tottenham and Ipswich each have 35 points from 28 games.

CROWD OF 45,000

Smith, 27, a star of the England team last season, got a hero's welcome from a 45,000 crowd at London's White Hart Lane Stadium.

Welsh international winger Cliff Jones headed Tottenham into the lead in the 17th minute. Then 20 minutes later Danny Branchflower, Tottenham's captain, split the Nottingham defence and laid on the pass for Smith to make it 2-0.

Jim Hockley got a goal for Nottingham and made it 2-1 at half-time, but there was no holding Tottenham in the second half. Jones got another goal and left winger Terry Medwin also scored.

Burnley fought back at Everton after trailing 1-0 at half-time. Irish international inside-forward Jimmy McElroy tied the score in the first minute of the second half. Seven minutes later Ray Pointer sent Burnley into the lead.

TIES SCORE AGAIN

Roy Vernon, Everton's Welsh international inside-left, deadlocked the score again with a 20-yard shot in the 69th minute.

BORDER SHOT MISSES GUARD

BERLIN (Reuters) — East German police fired several shots near the West Berlin border during the night, at least one of them aimed at a West Berlin policeman.

They said an East German guard, seeing a West Berlin policeman watching him, shouted "you there, disappear."

When the West Berlin policeman did not move, the East guard raised his sub-machine-gun and fired a shot which hit the concrete wall just below the West Berlin policeman.

SHOOTING

The shooting... bullets were flying everywhere and shells were falling all over me and around me as I lay on the floor. I felt something hit my back, but I just lay there and didn't move.

"The bullets smashed the television set and were flying into the walls."

He said about 11 shots were fired before the gunman fled from the room.

After the killer left the room, Egley, bleeding slightly from a bullet wound in the hip, stumbled past the two bodies on the floor and phoned the lobby to have someone try to stop the man.

John Keller said he received a call from Egley and went to the hotel room.

"I entered the room and saw the two men lying on the floor and Mr. Egley sitting on the bed in a state of shock," he said.

"There was blood on the carpet and bullet holes in the walls."

Taxi driver Sammy Chessa, 35, who picked up the gunman as he walked out of the hotel, said:

"He was a cool one. He did not show any panic, any excitement."

"He walked out and waved nonchalantly to me and waited while I drove over and opened the door."

"He got in and said, 'To the airport—and get me there as fast as you can.'"

As the cab pulled away, Police Constable Leonard Galbraith waved it down. Galbraith had been stationed in front of the hotel as Short's "cover man."

"The policeman told my passenger that someone wanted to see him and asked if he'd wait a minute," Chessa said. "The man said he had to go to the travel agency."

SLID OVER

After the policeman again told the man to wait, the passenger slid over behind Chessa and pulled a gun.

"I turned around and I was looking right into it," said the cab driver. "He ordered the policeman to get in the cab with him. The policeman opened the back door and climbed in."

"... I drove about a block and the first thing I knew there was a scuffle in the back seat. I jammed on the brake and jumped out."

The policeman and the suspect fell out, fighting.

SHAKING

"The policeman asked me to help him get the handcuffs on, but I don't think I was much help. I was shaking so much I could hardly write my name when he asked for it."

Both victims were married and each had three children. Detective Short survived an earlier encounter with a gunman who drew on him when he answered a holdup call in 1955. The policeman fired first and hit the bandit in the spine, crippling him for life.

The story of Friday's shooting started when a man walked into a downtown travel service office, asked for a ticket to Rome and offered a Pan American credit card.

The travel service phoned Pan American and officials found that the card had been reported stolen in New York.

Police Chief Ernest Goodall of Rindge, N.H., said Lifton left the southern New Hampshire town about a year ago. Goodall said Lifton worked as a cook.

POWERS

and met them from the Soviet side. The Soviet group also was in civilian clothes.

For 20 minutes, the two groups waited while one of the Americans telephoned to checkpoint Charlie. When he returned with news that Pryor had reached West Berlin, the two men were exchanged.

With the Americans was a clean-shaven man in a fur cap, dark suit and dark overcoat. This apparently was Powers.

SPEDY DEPARTURE

Great secrecy and speed marked Powers' movements thereafter. A tight security guard was thrown around him. He left in a U.S. Air Force plane so quickly that he did not even talk with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, President Kennedy's envoy in Berlin.

From Berlin, Powers flew to Wiesbaden. Here the tightest security again was maintained.

Reporters and photographers were barred from the base, which swarmed with air force security forces and FBI agents.

Powers changed to another air force plane, believed to have left for Washington between 4.30 and 5 a.m. EST but the air force declined to confirm or give any details.

Powers was tried in a Russian court. He pleaded guilty to espionage and was sentenced to ten years—three in prison and seven in a Russian prison colony.

A Soviet source said that when Powers was released from Vladimir prison Thursday he declared fervently, "I will never fly over the Soviet Union again." The pilot was said to be in good health and spirits as he began his journey home.

The U-2 incident broke just prior to a Big Four summit meeting in Paris in May, 1960. Khrushchev, ranting at what he called an audacious act, used the episode to short-circuit the conference.

The White House said efforts to obtain Powers' freedom "have been under way for some time."

JAILED FOR ESPIONAGE

Abel was sent to federal prison after his conviction of espionage in 1957.

The White House announcement said:

"Efforts to obtain Mr. Powers' release have been under way for some time. In recent efforts the United States government has had the co-operation and assistance of Mr. James R. Donovan, a New York attorney."

Donovan was Abel's lawyer during his trial. Mrs. Abel is reported to have written Donovan asking him to try and get clemency for her husband.

A number of letters were exchanged between Donovan and Mrs. Abel containing discussion of "various possibilities for Abel's release."

more than the government's offer.

Shareholders' committees have also been organized to seek a better deal.

Financial circles believe the group now seeking to get control of the company might consider the $38 settlement, or perhaps work out something else with the government that would be satisfactory to both sides.

Attorney-General R. W. Bonner said here today the move by the Toronto group lends support to what he called "rumblings among the shareholders."

"When corporation shareholders met in Vancouver a few weeks ago they voted two to one in favor of accepting the $38 offer," Mr. Bonner said. "It was only the votes of directors by proxy which caused the offer to be turned down."

"I'm getting a number of letters from shareholders expressing themselves along this line," he said.

One of the most interesting aspects of the affair to diplomats was that Russia for the first time has acknowledged an interest in Abel. The Soviets previously had studiously refrained from admitting he was one of its own.

It was expected, however, that Abel would remain in East Germany with his wife for a time before going on to the Soviet Union. This would tend to play down any great-Kremlin interest in his fate.

Abel was the only Russian spy master ever captured and convicted by the United States, so far as is known. He was considered by American officials to be one of the Soviet Union's top espionage operatives.

Powers, by contrast, was simply a pilot with specialized skills who allowed himself to be captured when, for reasons still somewhat obscure, he and his plane fell into Russian hands.

U.S. officials apparently considered that after four years Abel could not have any secrets that would still be of value to Russia.

WAS SECOND RELEASE

This was the second release of Soviet-held U.S. flyers since President Kennedy took office. At his first presidential press conference in January, 1961, Kennedy announced the Soviet release of two imprisoned RB-47 crew members, Capt. John R. McKone of Topeka, Kan., and Capt. Freeman B. Olmstead, of Elmira, N.Y.

They had been held captive by the Russians for almost seven months after their reconnaissance plane was shot down over Arctic waters July 1, 1960.

legislative package of higher assistance neared completion. Already approved is the increase to $65 monthly from $55 — to be effective last February — in old age pension payments to all persons 70 or over.

Also sent to the Senate were bills providing equivalent increases for the needy blind and for those aged 65 to 69 who are judged to needing assistance, both paid on a cost-sharing basis with the provinces.

Ready for third and final reading Monday is a bill extending the same increase to persons recognized as disabled.

All three measures would take effect Feb. 1 when given royal assent.

Veterans Minister Churchill introduced a resolution preceding a bill to pay more than $677,000 a year in pensions to First and Second World War seamen, Second World War civilian firefighters serving in Britain and other persons qualifying as non-veterans who held hazardous wartime posts.

Western Convoys, Flights Answer Red Berlin 'Test'

BERLIN (Reuters) — The West went on demonstrating its access rights to Berlin on the ground today after similar moves in the air Friday promptly answered a Soviet "reaction test."

This morning another U.S. Army convoy rumbled along the 110-mile autobahn from West Berlin to West Germany for what an official statement called "training in West Germany." Such convoys have been travelling the highway through East Germany daily in recent weeks to demonstrate the Western right of unhindered road access to Berlin.

Meanwhile, Western officials said everything was normal on the three air corridors linking West Berlin with West Germany—the scene of Western "demonstration" flights Thursday and Friday after the Russians vainly sought to make exclusive "reservations" in them for Soviet military transports on the mornings of the two days.

Mr. Bennett's Budget

EVEN THOUGH PREMIER BENNETT's latest budget is in deficit it does not appear to offer any significant financial aid to the hard-pressed British Columbia municipalities.

The government's total expenditures on education, Mr. Bennett says, will be greatly increased in the next year, but so will essential costs in a growing school population. Without a definite change in the government's policy, the position of the municipalities will not be improved, though they had been encouraged to expect some new assistance from the provincial treasury. Mr. Bennett's promise that his B.C. Hydro will pay money to municipal governments in lieu of its former taxes leaves the existing situation unchanged at best.

However, Mr. Bennett's budget statement is strictly confined to revenue and expenditure. He has left himself elbowroom to announce some change in his treatment of the municipalities before the Legislature adjourns and such changes, presumably, could be fitted into his figures.

If this is his intention it should be announced without further delay. If it is not, the Legislature should be told why he cannot afford any real aid for the municipal home owners whose assessments have been generally increased.

The fact disguised in the budget is that Mr. Bennett does not expect to pay all his expenditures out of next year's revenues. He will dip into the accumulated surpluses of the past for $20 millions.

This, on the face of it, is deficit budgeting for the fiscal year starting April 1. But Mr. Bennett keeps his books in a unique and flexible fashion. By deliberately underestimating some of his estimates, or underestimating his income, he could perhaps keep total spending within his revenues. He may know, but he does not tell the Legislature, what he really intends to spend.

It seems pretty clear, though, that his easy days of finance, with the constantly increasing revenues of a long boom, are finished. Perhaps also Mr. Bennett may feel that after all his tax hikes he cannot increase the taxpayer's load—for the present at least. It is being increased just the same through his creatures, the municipalities, and, in a well-disguised fashion, through the rising cost of his indirect but real debt, now over a billion and a quarter dollars.

That Mr. Bennett does not find his financial position as comfortable as it used to be is indicated by the relatively minor increase in the new budget's total. Though the total has long been too high, this year's $16 million increase is modest in view of the growth in British Columbia's population and, among other things, a substantial salary raise for civil servants.

Having made British Columbia the champion spender, taxpayer and borrower among Canadian provinces, Mr. Bennett apparently is trying to put the brakes on, a little anyway. But it is incredible that out of his enormous revenues, his accumulated surpluses and his promise of great economic growth in the immediate future he has not yet devised any relief for those underprivileged and desperate orphans of government, the municipalities and their home owners.

But it is incredible that out of his enormous revenues, his accumulated surpluses and his promise of great economic growth in the immediate future he has not yet devised any relief for those underprivileged and desperate orphans of government, the municipalities and their home owners.

Putting Off the Inevitable

UNLESS A SWELLING TIDE of public opinion refloats the issue—and there is no present indication of such a tide—Greater Victoria amalgamation-metro proposals will probably rest for some time high and dry on the reefs of discord.

Victoria has called for a formal study of the matter. The adjacent municipalities have rejected the suggestion and agree only to informal discussions in the inter-municipal committee—a course unacceptable to the city.

The public is left with the unanswered question:

Why shouldn't unbiased and competent persons study the whole problem and bring in a report with recommendations on the most desirable form of local government for Greater Victoria?

The play and counterplay of so many people who have entered the debate serves merely to obscure the desirability of a study project undertaken by unprejudiced experts. Mr. Bruch, the provincial member for Esquimalt, suggests a county form of government. Mr. Tisdalle, the provincial member for Saanich—badly beaten when he contested the reeve'ship against the pro-amalgamation candidate—fobs off the whole issue by saying amalgamation "should be good for the winning of a couple more elections." Two Victoria MLAs endorse the move to have a metropolitan system studied.

Victoria's council backs a request for such a study. Saanich turns a similar motion down on a four-to-three division and Oak Bay and Esquimalt reject the whole idea as a threat to minority rights within a democracy.

Oak Bay and Esquimalt make a considerable show of their willingness to talk the whole thing over in intermunicipal committee. Of course, they're willing to take that action; knowing that in such discussions they can effectively prevent decision. They are ready to continue courting, but seem to have little intention of popping the question.

No one has accepted Mayor Dick Wilson's challenge to Oak Bay and Esquimalt to ask their voters if they favor or are opposed to a study under the Municipal Act. Reeve Stanley Murphy says the issue is not dead but may hang fire in Saanich until the voters express their opinion at next December's election on councillors who opposed the study.

The terms of the municipal act make it possible for the provincial government to set up a study of metropolitan government, if requested by municipalities. Under the act, moreover, the minister of municipal affairs can, if he wishes, order a vote on the results of the study, but calling such a vote is not mandatory. If a vote is held, and simple majorities favor a metro system in two-thirds of the municipalities where the ballot is taken, the minister can, but does not have to, require metropolitan government for the municipalities concerned.

This, argue the reeves of Esquimalt and Oak Bay, is too big a risk. They say—and no doubt they honestly believe they represent the sentiment of their residents—that they don't want metro.

Of course, amalgamation or metro should not be forced on any municipality if a majority of its people want neither. Voters should however, be given all the factual information, devoid of parochial prejudice, on which to form intelligent opinion instead of emotional response.

As matters now stand, the obstructionists have won a little more time before the pressure of events forces them into a union which should be receiving careful, detailed and logical investigation now.

Dean Chant Talks Turkey

CONSCIENTIOUS PARENTS OF school children have occasion, we believe, to thank Dean S. N. F. Chant for his forthright talk to Victoria teachers yesterday.

Since the distinguished member of the University of British Columbia arts faculty filed the report on provincial education which bears his name, he has had plenty of time to consider criticism levelled at it.

He can be forgiven if he shows some impatience with those who missed what some have considered the basic element in the report—the need to teach children at an early age that accomplishment usually comes from effort.

The original report made it very plain that more hard work was needed from our students. The dean's Victoria speech underlines that opinion.

"In all walks of life there are many things that each of us must do whether they are interesting or not, and young people should learn this in order to become responsible citizens," he states.

This is too tough a world to permit people always to take the easy way, the pleasant way, and to duck the chores they don't like, Dean Chant points out. The sooner the young generation—which is going to have to do the hard thinking in future—understands that, the better it will be.

Still Time—Probably

THE LATE HOUR AND THE need for some major event to crown the centennial year celebrations makes the engagement of a professional organization to study our problem a sound move.

There may still be time to pull the whole program together with something that will highlight Victoria's one-hundredth anniversary. It has become quite evident, however, that the required knowledgeable direction is not available locally. To seek advice elsewhere is therefore a logical step, and the organization now engaged points, to 39 years of experience in this sort of planning.

Perhaps now we can get things under way and produce a centennial star turn for a program which so far has only a background.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

AS WE MOVE along the suburban roads and see the fields bright with new green grass, do we ever think how valuable a plant this is?

Perhaps the grasses are the most important of all the plants on earth. The grains, sugar cane and the bamboo belong to this family.

Grasses are essential for our milk and our meat, our bread and butter. There are many species and each has its own habitat—the open field, the hedgerows and the deep woods.

Without the grasses our land would become a desert, as they keep the rains from eroding our hillsides.

The seeds are a source of food for many birds and small animals. Without the grassy fields many of our birds would soon vanish from the earth.

As we walk across a field and feel the soft, springy turf under our feet there is a feeling of being at one with the earth.

It is difficult to imagine the earth without its green covering. When man has destroyed the natural growth, dust storms, soil erosion and other calamities have followed. The tiny roots of grass are the anchor of the earth's fertility.

In the summer when the fields are ready for the hay harvest, and the winds play across the tops of the grass in waves, they create a fascinating sight.

The study of grass and its place in the scheme of life is one of the most interesting botanical pursuits.

FROM WASHINGTON

What You Get Is an Impression of Movement and Change

IN tones of mild bewilderment, the Western embassies in Moscow have lately been reporting decidedly curious occurrences at meetings and lectures in the Soviet capital and elsewhere in Russia.

Following the posthumous trial of Josef Stalin at the 22nd Party Congress, attempts were made to expound this gigantic and unsettling event to the general public.

In accordance with Soviet practice, the lectures usually ended with question periods. And the question periods produced pretty embarrassing inquiries, such as:

"Since all these crimes were committed, why were we not told about them long ago?"

And: "If Stalin and many of his close subordinates committed such terrible crimes, what about the other high officials who worked intimately with Stalin?"

And, at quite recent meetings: "Why has not Molotov been tried as a criminal in view of what we now know about him?"

The mere fact that such questions are being publicly asked in the Soviet Union is surprising enough. It means, obviously, that an exceedingly powerful, as yet unpredictable ferment has been started by the hideous revelations of the 22nd Congress.

But this is only natural, when you recall the ferment that was started by Khrushchev's secret, unpublished speech to the 20th Congress in 1956, and when you further remember that the revelations of the 22nd Congress were published throughout Russia.

The demonologists are sure of the existence of this ferment, but they are not sure of anything else.

It may be that Molotov is going to be made to take the rap for the murder of Sergei M. Kirov, the crime that was the starting signal for Stalin's general blood bath, and the one crime mentioned at the 22nd Congress without any accompanying mention of the guilty person. But this answer to the questions about Molotov is still thought to be improbable.

Again, it may be that Khrushchev is under pressure, from the younger generation in the Presidium and party secretariat, to carry the de-Stalinization process still further.

At the Party Congress, the younger men used far more violent language in discussing the crimes of the past than the colleagues of the older generation, notably including Khrushchev himself. But this pressure, if it exists, seems to be balanced by a conservative counter-pressure from the army and other groups of Soviet society.

The truth is that Soviet society is no longer frozen into a hard, clear mold, which permits clear, sure readings of each new development.

Consider, for instance, still another phenomenon which is now puzzling the demonologists. It just could presage a very deep social change, starting in the problem area of agriculture; but no one is quite sure of the right reading.

After the 22nd Congress, in brief, Khrushchev's closest ally among satellite leaders, Gomulka of Poland, made a report on the great events in Moscow to the Polish party. In this report, he developed a thesis that once would have caused any Communist leader anywhere to be burned at the stake for heresy.

Stalin's crimes, said Gomulka, had their origin in the forced collectivization of Russian farming. Collectivization was simply too bloody a business, Gomulka argued, and after that, bloodshed begot bloodshed.

This was startling enough. But after Gomulka's speech, one of the bright new stars of the Soviet Communist Party secretariat, Pyotr Demichev, visited Poland and had a look at the only privately owned farms in the whole Communist half of the world. His reaction was given in an interview in the Polish newspaper, Tribuna Ludu.

"We have seen," said Party Secretary Demichev warmly, "that the agricultural policy of your country has given good results."

In the old days, this would have been a bit like George M. Humphrey coming out for state management of industry in an interview with Pravda. Now, Demichev's comment on Polish farming is merely another eyebrow-raising development, about which the demonologists say, in effect:

"Maybe it means a lot, more likely very little. We'll know when the Central Committee meets in Moscow March 5. Agriculture will be the main topic, so they've announced."

Add that some of the experts also think that the Central Committee meeting in March will produce a thunderous blast at the Chinese Communists, which will bring Moscow and Peking very close to a final break.

Add that other forecasters think the Central Committee meeting will indeed be solely devoted to agriculture, but believe that it will produce no far-reaching reforms, but simply another long list of palliative remedies.

What you get, in sum, is an impression of movement and change in the Soviet Union and the Communist bloc. Because all is shifting, the old guide lines are no longer dependable. This is hard on the forecasters, but it may not prove to be a bad thing in the end.

A Few Papuans Must Speak for the Stone Age Masses

IN the centre of the storm between Holland and Indonesia on the future of Dutch West New Guinea there are 700,000 people to whose opinions nobody appears to pay much attention. These are the Papuans and related indigenous peoples of "West Irian," who constitute more than 95 per cent of the population of the disputed territory.

President Sukarno claims that their land is already part of Indonesia, and threatens war if necessary to gain control of it. The Dutch, while proposing a form of UN trusteeship as a prelude to self-determination, rule it as a colony. But what do the Papuans think?

The majority of the native peoples of West New Guinea are still at a Stone Age level of civilization, and of these about 300,000 continue their somewhat bloodthirsty existence in the interior without even knowing that they are administered at all.

Most Papuans have no conception of Holland, Indonesia, independence, federal autonomy, the Afro-Asian bloc or Coca-Cola. Many could still be found who, faced with a choice of rulers, would simply vote for the man who promised that he would allow them not only to kill their neighbors with impunity, but to eat them in peace also.

But they cannot be ignored. One day, perhaps, they will be making their own atom bombs. The small number of educated Papuans must, therefore, be permitted to speak with some authority on behalf of the masses today.

Emigre Papuans, groomed by the Indonesians for the future government of "West Irian" ("Hot Country"), have faithfully echoed Sukarno's irredentist demands, have clamoured for the "liberation" of their country, and have sworn that their colonial brothers in New Guinea are itching to throw off the Dutch yoke and to welcome the Indonesians.

Neutral observers believe this to be true of certain areas from which the pro-Indonesian Papuan leaders come, like the island of Irian off the north coast of New Guinea, and of rare communities, like Merauke in the south, in which the microscopic Indonesian minority is locally strong.

But elsewhere the Dutch tell a different story. They relate that whenever Indonesian armed parties have landed on the coast with orders to infiltrate the interior and spread disaffection, the Papuans have actively helped the police and military to corner them.

Moreover, when the Dutch appealed last year for volunteers to form the first Papuan defence unit—now 220 strong—ten times that number turned up.

Papuan representatives who dominate the partially-elected New Guinea National Council, set up by the Dutch last year as a first step towards self-government, declared last month that it would be easy to raise an army of 5,000 trained men within six months to fight the Indonesians and urged that the volunteer Papuan forces should be expanded.

Theo Bot, Dutch Secretary of State for New Guinea Affairs, who was visiting Holland, the capital, said that such a measure was unnecessary. The Papuan delegates, solidly in favor of The Hague's policy of granting independence to New Guinea, then retorted that they still wished "to make President Sukarno fully understand that we are resolved on defending our country and our right to freedom."

The New Guinea Council finally adopted two resolutions, one recommending that a UN commission be invited to assist in finding a peaceful solution to the Dutch-Indonesian dispute, the other calling for a strengthening of Papuan defence forces.

It may be objected that the Papuan members of the Dutch-sponsored council are automatically anti-Indonesian. But, conditioned by the choice between a colonial power fighting a rear-guard action and ready to accord independence, and an expansionist Asian neighbor with acquisitive eyes, their arguments deserve a hearing.

The Papuan vice-chairman of the council, Nicholas Jowle, has said: "Indonesia is in no position to do anything for us. It appears evident that Indonesia is already much too large a country for the financial and technical capabilities of its people."

THE BEST NEEDN'T BOW THE KNEE

We Should Not Forget to Express Disgust at a Bad Job

IT MUST be ten years ago that I met Mr. F. C. Hooper in the studio of a friend of mine, and had a most interesting conversation with him while he was buying a couple of paintings to hang on the walls of a "little place" he had just bought in the country.

How little the place was remains to this day something of an enigma, since he mentioned that the room in which he proposed to hang his collection had been at one time what he rather airily called "a sort of chapel." The only place I have ever been in—not counting palaces, of course—that contained a "sort of chapel" as one of the domestic fixtures is Hatfield House, and I doubt if even Mr. Hooper would call Hatfield "little."

Mr. Hooper may not be known to you by name, but I am sure you will have heard of the enterprise of which he is one of the larger and livelier luminaries: namely Schweppes, Incorporated. I would guess that the hiring of Stephen Potter, to write their copy was one of Mr. Hooper's brainwaves, and the Commander Whitehead campaign which resulted in the reconquest of North America was another.

So when he began to talk about advertising I put down my glass (in which, to judge by the taste, my painter friend usually put paintbrushes to soak) and gave him my undivided attention.

He had just returned from a tour of the United States at the time of our encounter, and had been royally entertained by the boys of Madison Avenue. After they had shown him all there was to see, and dazzled him with their schemes and promotions and gimmicks of every sort, they asked him what he thought of U.S. advertising.

He said he thought it was remarkably impressive in the way it made use of every possible medium, but there was only one thing that worried him about it, and that was its very old-fashioned insistence in boring the customer with statistics about the product.

"Just like the literature wrapped round Beecham's pill boxes pre-World War I," was the way he expressed it. "You're 50 years behind the times," he told them.

He tried to explain that in Europe high-class products had turned to one or other of two approaches in advertising: the "prestige" ad which barely mentioned the manufacturer in the course of presenting a beautiful color reproduction of some great work of art, or a drawing commissioned from some outstanding contemporary artist; and the humorous ad, pioneered by Totals and Accies and Pollock in the London Underground, and developed by Schweppes to a fine art.

At that time I had no personal opinion about U.S. advertising, but now that I have, I would be inclined to agree with Mr. Hooper (who must surely by this time be at least Sir F., if not Lord Schweppes).

It is only in the last few years that American advertising has begun to take a tip from the superb eye-catching layouts that are a commonplace in Switzerland and France and Germany, and the majority of billboards "south of the line" are still a riot of corny commercial art and insensitive lettering.

The best Canadian advertising doesn't need to bow the knee to anyone—I was particularly struck by the clothes-pin ad run by B.C. Electric a few years back, and Bapco put out two or three in a row that were as good as anything I've ever seen—but unfortunately not all advertisers seem to have sufficient confidence in their agencies to enable the admen to give of their best.

I cannot believe, for example, that anyone but the sponsor is responsible for that particularly nauseating bread sign that disfigures one of our main intersections downtown. Nobody under the age of ninety-nine could have that sort of taste, surely. It belongs with Pears Soap's "Bubbles" in a bygone age.

Since advertising seems to be here to stay, I think it is time that we consumers insisted on advertising that added something to the gaiety of life.

We could raise the standard by paying more attention to the quality of the ads that meet the eye wherever we turn.

We might look out for the annual exhibition of Advertising and Editorial Art held by the Montreal Art Directors Club, and note which firms and which artists carry off the honors. We should never forget to congratulate our storekeepers when they offer us merchandise in an attractive package designed by an artist in that line.

We should not forget, either, to express our disgust with a bad job when we see one.

Look, for instance, at the unbelievably crude lettering that disfigures most modern automobiles. I followed a Daimler for miles the other day until, at a traffic light, I learned that it was an Oldsmobile. If I had the concession for these vehicles I would inform the manufacturer that the main idea of putting the name on a car is to identify it, not disguise it.

Lovey's lettering on the Studebaker, he designed in an object lesson in elegance and clarity, and it will eventually penetrate the mastodon-thick skulls in Detroit that cheap and gaudy lettering doesn't belong even on expensive and gaudy automobiles.

Good taste, they say, costs no more—but we still have a long way to go before every manufacturer really grasps this simple fact.

My little daughter, Angela, wrote: "Daddy, why not draw a horse in the picture next time." Here it is. I saw this picture when I was driven by car through the lovely surroundings of Vernon—an old English stable with the horses standing in the snow. I learned that some of the best horses once were raised here for the old stage coaches. One got the feeling that these horses knew, listening to the sound of automobiles, that their time was past. John Smirch in Canada

THIS column's wife has an uncanny habit of presaging events. She generally does it at the breakfast table, where her words are only picked up, if at all, by the subconscious, and this gives her a fine opportunity to say "What did I tell you?" when her prophecies are established. Since a vague bell always rings, nobody has ever been able, with absolute conviction, to deny her her triumphs.

It was only on Tuesday that she read an item in the morning bugle announcing the award of $1,000 to a student who had written an essay proving that the Chief Justice of the United States was a Communist. This startling proposition, and the even more startling reward which its enunciation provoked, woke this column with a start.

"Nothing like that could ever happen in this drab country!" it rejoined. "No wonder everyone goes down there to make their fortune. It's so easy. Hoo boy! Hand me my pen. I'm going to have a go at Patrick Kiewit!"

"Here you are," said the discriminating helpmeet, "and here is paper. The time is ripe, and we could use the money!"

"Don't be ridiculous. This is no time of the day to be serious. As I think I said, it wouldn't work in this sobered country."

"Just wait and see!" she said, pouring herself some coffee in an ominous manner.

Not more than three days had passed before this very newspaper announced that Dr. Norman Alcock, the scientific peace man, had been accused by one Geza Benko, at the University of B.C., of being a Communist front in the United States.

It is indeed hard to imagine anyone so naive as Dr. A. being a front for anything except a professional fund raiser, but the incident bears out the uncanny prophetic gifts of this column's wife and also sends a beam of hope out to needy writers.

Geza Benko, it appears, represents a growing body of Canadian "youth" whose opposition to Communism is expressed in antilulian sentiments such as are frequently heard in the excitable republic to the south; in the course of which the respectable word "conservative" has come in for a whole new series of twisted meanings, reminiscent of the disruptive methods of the Communist Party itself.

It is heartening to note that staid old Canada is keeping in the swim of things. If Geza and his friends will now award a literary prize (of a remunerative nature, of course) this column would be delighted to seek it; eminent public figures have a notorious dislike for bringing libel actions

GRANTS FOR TOURIST PROMOTION TRIPLED

The B.C. government has tripled the amount of money available for local tourist promotion grants this year.

Budget estimates for the recreation department show $150,000 has been set aside as matching grants to regional areas.

Last year's budget provided only $50,000.

The estimates also show a big boost in spending on the new California trade and tourist office opened last August under former agriculture minister Newton P. Steacy.

It gets a total of $62,978.

Last year's allotment was only $25,000 for the first few months of operation. This amount was later boosted by $30,000 in special warrants.

Bennett to Name New 'Financial Adviser'

Premier Bennett plans to appoint a new financial adviser, according to his budget estimates this year.

Cash Yield Likely From Peace Timber

The B.C. government expects to spend $630,110 on salvaging timber from the Peace River country to be flooded for power development—and get the money back from sales.

A special vote in the 1962-63 estimates allows money for building access roads into the area around Portage Mountain where the Peace dam will be built.

The government plans extensive timber salvaging from the area once the access roads—to cost $470,000—are built.

The estimates for his office list $12,000 for the post of "economic research secretary."

There was no such post previously.

Up to October 1961 J. V. Fisher was the premier's "economic adviser." He got $17,500 for the job. But last fall he was appointed B.C. agent-general in London.

So far the premier had made no announcement about the new appointment.

It is expected he may say something when his estimates come up for detailed discussion in the legislature in about two weeks.

TRAFFIC FINES

In city police court Friday: Paul Malyniak, 127 Howe Street, no driver's licence, $10. James Rhys James, 2661 Capital Heights, careless driving, $40. Stanley Hagyard, 1632 Rockland, careless driving, $40.

College, UBC to Get Increased Gov't Grants

Bigger grants for both Victoria College and the University of B.C. are planned by the government this year.

Chinese Escape Reds

Macao (AP) — Thirteen fugitives from Communist China jumped from their fishing junk Friday to escape the fire of Red patrol boats and swam to safety in this tiny Portuguese colony. The fugitives, all under 25, said they decided to flee from neighboring Chungshan, in Kwangtung Province, because they were hungry.

The 1962-63 budget estimates show that UBC will receive $1,000,000 more than in the past year.

Most of the money is for the college of education, an increase in the general grant and $150,000 toward establishing a new college of dentistry.

INCREASE PROVIDED

Victoria College will get a total of $1,654,000 from the government. Last year it got $1,378,000.

Big jump this year is in the general grant, which goes from $464,000 to $625,000.

Biggest spending increase in education department estimates is to expand vocational and technical training.

The appropriation is $1,347,799, compared with $642,460 last year.

General grants toward school costs total $63,675,000, compared with $60,137,500.

REPORTING

OTTAWA—What Mr. Briggs said is going to be tongue-rolled around this country until the day the votes are counted.

He's Mr. Diefenbaker's man, but the Grits are going to use what he said to try to prove the PM is attempting to hoodwink the people with his talk about a national power grid.

What Mr. Keenleyside said is going to be bruited about too. He's Mr. Bennett's man, and Mr. Bennett is no friend of the PM, but the Tories will use what he said to try to prove that what Mr. Briggs said is a lot of hot air.

Add to this the fact that Mr. Keenleyside was Mr. Briggs' boss until Mr. Briggs couldn't stomach any more of Mr. Bennett, or vice versa, and you have all the makings of a situation of supreme confusion.

Liberal front-bencher Lionel Chevrier already has twitted the PM about "Concepts and Economics of Extra Long Distance Direct Current Transmission and System Interconnection."

This is a paper presented at the 1961 annual meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada by H. L. Briggs, MEIC, member of the National Energy Board (to which he was appointed by Diefenbaker) and former general manager of the British Columbia Power Commission.

For anyone who wants to deflate the PM's airy references to a national power grid, Briggs' paper is required reading. Like page 7, col. 2: "no advantage is clearly apparent to justify the construction of a trans-Canada grid system." And page 8, col. 2: "A commercially dependable trans-Canada power grid from southern Ontario to B.C. integrated with the various local utilities through which it passes, is not a serious consideration in the foreseeable future . . . from the viewpoint of transmission economics."

Dr. H. L. Keenleyside, chairman of the B.C. Power Commission, patted the power grid idea on the head in an address a couple of months ago. "The dream of a national network may be much nearer than was anticipated even three years ago," he said, adding that "it is a dream that we all should seek to turn into reality."

That sounds fine. The trouble is, Keenleyside doesn't document his conclusion, whereas Briggs does. And Keenleyside also admits the fact that faces the national grid proponents: cheap Alberta coal and Saskatchewan hydro make these provinces' dependence on outside sources unnecessary.

Briggs also states that "Long distance high voltage direct current transmission appears to be distinctly advantageous in some circumstances. The greatest possibilities are those involving the development of a large power source, whose output is transmitted straight through without intermediate interconnections to a large power consuming area."

This is a section of the Briggs' paper the Tories may quote in answer to Liberal charges that the Diefenbaker vision needs to visit the optometrist, so far as the national grid is concerned.

Briggs is perfectly right. The Swedes, the Russians, the Americans and the New Zealanders agree. But long distance high voltage DC transmission, say, between British Columbia and Toronto—is not a national power grid, and, except that it may impress the less knowledgeable of the voters, there is no reason for John Diefenbaker to pretend that it is.

BEASTALL ADVISES

'Action Stations' Cry
As Pest Peak Foreseen

By JACK BEASTALL

Looking around the garden during the first week of February one comes across many surprising, or perhaps unexpected, happenings among plants, but nothing was more unexpected than four caterpillar webs from which the caterpillars had already emerged.

This is the earliest date I have recorded for this particular pest, the tent caterpillar.

Usually we are looking for egg bands on the young shoots of the fruit trees in February, lifting them off with a pocket knife and disposing of them in a hot fire.

The tents seen this week were on a 12-foot native conifer, making another first to record since I have never known them previously on coniferous trees. There are still two tents to deal with at the top of the tree where the last 18 inches of the leader is being rapidly defoliated.

Jack

Since the top of this tree is the favorite perching place for the many robins frequenting this district I had expected the caterpillars to have a short existence, but the birds have been most unco-operative.

We know that the tent caterpillar cycle is nearing its peak, and gardeners are not looking forward to the next year or so with relief for they recall the damage resulting from previous peak seasons.

KEEP WATCH

Therefore it will pay all of us to search for the brownish bands of eggs on trees and shrubs, and keep careful watch for the formation of tents, or webs, on the tips of branches.

The webs are spun for protection by the young caterpillars as soon as they hatch. Inside this shield they devour the tender foliage and rapidly increase in size.

After a few days the larger ones break away from the web and move to a more abundant supply of food, eventually gaining sufficient size to leave the host plant and venture into the big and wonderful world.

Every egg band we can destroy, and every web that is spotted as soon as it is spun and promptly removed, means a hundred or so less caterpillars to plague us later.

Other common garden inhabitants which have me a little worried by their numbers this season are the slugs.

Working among the herbaceous perennials removing dead leaves and weeds has revealed a greater population of these than I care to ignore. The tender green shoots of the perennials are most delectable tidbits to a slug, and since so many perennials have already started into growth they are ensured a banquet royal. To save the plants will require a two-step program.

First should come the removal of all trash such as bricks, boards, large stones, and anything else which will form safe hiding places, followed by the gathering of plant wastes in the form of dead leaves and flower stalks from the plants themselves and weeds growing nearby.

Sanitary practices of this nature are most important, not only against slugs, but where any pest or disease is involved. A lot of our gardening troubles could be averted with a return to good husbandry.

Once the safe hideouts have been eliminated a great many slugs will provide food for certain birds, a dish to which they are assuredly welcome.

SLUG-DRUNK
Slug baits are the second step. The newer baits are based on metaldehyde (canned heat) which has an irresistible attraction for slugs, and include a poison as well.

Metaldehyde itself does not kill. It is equivalent to a glorious drinking bout which leaves the slugs in a stupor from which they later recover, probably with a headache, but the poisons now added save the gardener the job of exterminating the imbibers.

Some of the baits are now available in the form of pellets which are easy to scatter among the leaves and crowns of plants, and in other places likely to provide hiding places during daylight hours.

The loose baits, something like bran, are still available with metaldehyde added. In using these it is best to provide a protective covering to prolong the effectiveness of the bait.

Old soup tins in the smaller sizes make fine protectors. A small quantity of the bait is placed in the can, which is laid on the soil on its side in strategic places, and a little earth is thrown inside to make a path to the bait. Slugs do not like travelling over the surface of tin.

The loose baits may also be scattered into and around plants but the effectiveness is lessened through contact with moisture making necessary more frequent applications.

It would appear that the peak of unemployment for this winter was reached Jan. 31 when 4,716 applications for work were counted," the report said.

Since then 94 men have been taken off the jobless list while 52 women, normal for the post-Christmas season, were added. Net reduction was 43.

The report said an early start in tourist business, due to the Victoria centennial and Seattle world's fair, is expected "very shortly" to provide jobs for many of the women.

Electrical Switch Handling
Must Be Done With Caution

By MR. FIX

Replacing an electric switch is one of the least difficult jobs in the house for the careful handyman. While the modern wall switch is superior in both looks and operation to the old-fashioned push-button gadget, the box in which it fits and the wiring setup are the same. The work consists mainly of simply switching switches.

You can have switches that are silent, perfect for middle-of-the-night operation. Most quiet is the mercury switch, but there are mechanical toggle switches that give off little noise, too. There's a rotary switch that operates by twisting which is also silent.

Exhibitors Grab
More Space
At Jaycee Fair

Exhibit space sales for this year's Victoria Jaycee's Fair, May 14-19, are running far ahead of past years, director Eric Charman reported Friday, and the indications are that the event will be the most successful in history.

Proceeds from this year's fair will go to the University Development Fund and the Jaycees have already committed themselves to a donation of $25,000 — which would be matched by an equal grant from the provincial government — to build a radio-isotope laboratory at the university.

Mr. Charman said that local firms had indicated they would co-operate in carrying out a Centennial theme in their exhibits this year.

He added that in addition to excellent response from local exhibitors, the indications were that there would be a good number of outside firms represented at the fair along with many new firms which have not taken space before.

Some switches have neon lights built into the toggle so that it glows in the dark. A switch plate with the same features can be purchased if desired.

For mom who may have both hands full, especially in the nursery, there's a push-button switch that responds readily to an outthrust elbow. One push and it's on, another and it's off.

Whether you are modernizing or simply replacing, there are certain basic steps to follow.

IMPORTANT: TURN OFF

Most important of all is turning off the electricity. Removing the fuse that controls the circuit on which you are working will do it. If you are not sure which fuse it is, turn on the light. When you've removed the right fuse, the light will go off.

Next, remove the two screws that hold the switch plate in place. Then remove the screws that hold the switch on the metal wall box.

Loosen the terminal screws on the old switch and remove the wires. Refasten the wires to the terminals on the new switch, then replace the switch and plate.

When connecting wires to the terminal posts, remember that the wire is wrapped around the post in a clockwise direction. This will prevent the wire from slipping off when the screw is tightened.

If you are lacking outlets, it's often possible to add a combination switch outlet in the same wall box. You'll know if it's possible as soon as you remove the face plate and peer inside.

FORGET IF SERIES

If there are four wires entering the box—two to the switch, two connected together—you can do it. If there are only two wires, both connected to the switch, forget it—the switch is wired in series.

The four wire connection is a parallel connection. The wires to the switch should be black—both "hot." The wires connected together will be white, the "cold" or neutral wires.

The hot wires are connected to the new switch-outlet. The third white wire is connected from the switch-outlet to the connection of the two white wires. These will probably be held together with a solderless connector—a plastic cap that screws over the ends of wires.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

If a new bed or border is to be made prepare it as soon as soil can be worked. Incorporate compost, peat moss and some coarse sand if necessary. Remove the roots of perennial weeds as they appear.

Bulb beds can be carefully hand-weeded now that tips of bulb growth are showing. Results of early weeding are pleasantly apparent when busy spring season arrives.

When growth on sweet peas started indoors reaches two pairs of leaves, pinch out top to one pair and remove plants to a cold frame which can be covered on cold nights or in excessively rainy periods.

Sow seeds indoors of verbena, petunia and ageratum. These take about 10 weeks of growing in flats under cover before being ready for planting in the garden. Started early, they will be in bud by May.

Palms and ferns in pots may need shifting to one size larger. Pot firmly for palms; loosely for ferns.

Cut back summer blooming pelargoniums (Martha Washington type) to make bushy; use the tips as cuttings.

If soil is sandy, or quick to drain of excess moisture, set a few early potatoes to sprout in a window. Plant them as soon as sprouts are half an inch long if ground is suitable then. Prepare coverings to use if frost threatens after shoots are above ground.

Give strawberry bed a raking and dressing of bonemeal three ounces to a square yard.

SHE WAS BOWLED OVER BY LOVE

OSLO (Reuters) — Boy hits girl. Boy visits girl. Boy marries girl.

That was the story of a Norwegian couple on their honeymoon today.

An Oslo man "got acquainted" with a young woman last year by accidentally running over her with his car. He drove the girl to a hospital, where he began to visit her regularly.

Soon after her recovery, he popped the question and she said "yes." Now they're on a post-wedding vacation—in the car—that brought them together, of course.

Dag's Death Blamed On Pilot

SALISBURY (Reuters) — A Rhodesian federal inquiry commission ruled Friday that the plane crash which killed Dag Hammarskjöld and 16 other persons was caused by a pilot's error.

A commission report said the pilot of the chartered Swedish DC-6B carrying the late United Nations secretary-general and his party allowed the plane to descend too low as it came in to land at Ndola Airport, Northern Rhodesia. Thus the plane hit trees and crashed, the three-man panel added.

The commission ruled out suggestions that the crash Sept. 17 last was caused by sabotage, a bomb on the plane or gunfire from the air or ground.

SAW TWO PLANES

Meanwhile, the UN commission inquiring into the crash met Friday at Ndola. It heard a Negro witness tell the now-familiar story of seeing two planes in the sky on the night of the crash, followed by an explosion.

A Swedish witness charged that some Ndola area Negroes knew more about the crash than they would admit but feared government or police reprisals.

Evidence obtained by the Rhodesian inquiry has been made available to the UN commission.

Canada Must Seek Trade For Harbors

lay its efforts to attract more trade through its ports. National Harbors Board Chairman Howard A. Mann said Thursday.

Addressing a joint lunch meeting of the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce at the Empress Hotel, he said that "although the situation has improved in recent years, too much of our traffic is moving via United States ports."

"We must realize, as do our friends across the border, that every ton of cargo which fails to routed through a Canadian port fails to make its contribution to the prosperity of this country."

Mr. Mann denied that this was "economic nationalism" but instead, "economic realism."

As an illustration of the importance of harbors to surrounding communities, Mr. Mann quoted an income of $900,000,000 at Canadian harbors in 1960.

The speaker pointed out that although the federal government had spent over $101,000,000 on harbors in the five years from 1956 the need justified the expense.

Being bounded on three sides by oceans and having "a great water highway into the interior of the country, we quite naturally have to provide ourselves with more ports than many a larger nation with only one coastline."

"To this country, which is so dependent on foreign trade, good ports at strategic locations are the sine qua non of economic existence."

Impaired Driver Jailed 3 Months On Third Offence

David Smith Gibb, 3225 Shelbourne, was sentenced Thursday in Saanich police court to three months imprisonment for impaired driving.

It was his third offence and he was also forbidden to drive anywhere in Canada for three years.

Police said Gibb was charged after a truck driven by him collided with a car Feb. 4 on Gorge Road West near Orillia.

Magistrate William Ostler said the man "was very fortunate" that the crown had erred in preparing its formal warning that it would seek a greater penalty and he was therefore unable to impose a stiffer sentence.

SPECIAL BULLETIN: This morning, Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Limited supplied tobacco counters with the full international King Size length cigarette—the cigarette pioneered by the Rothmans Group throughout the world. Now a good 18% longer than short cigarettes, Rothmans King Size will still sell at the same price as the short ones.

Originally, Rothmans had intended to postpone the launching of this cigarette until April 1st. On that date, a change in Government regulations will make it economically possible to produce the full international King Size length cigarette. But Rothmans, who make a habit of being first, decided to introduce this outstanding cigarette today.

Smokers will find the extra length of Rothmans King Size adds a great deal of smoothness to the cigarette. Extra smoothness and extra mildness. Naturally, with the added length of top quality Virginia tobacco, you'll enjoy extra flavour too. Good reasons for trying a pack of Rothmans King Size Filter in the new full international King Size length. It's a cigarette that really satisfies!

New Home Needs Electrical Plan

With each passing year electricity is called upon to do more jobs in the home. Once it was used solely to light the house. Today it helps the homeowner in an increasing range of tasks. Ten years from now electricity will undoubtedly have still further uses in the home. Some thought, therefore, should be given to future needs when planning the electrical system for a new home.

In areas where electricity is likely to be used either for cooking or heating, the capacity of the electric service entrance wires which carry electricity from the main cables to the house and fuse box, or "service entrance," should not be less than 100 amperes. A 60-amp service is no longer considered adequate in most new homes.

HEAVY CABLE.

A sufficient number of outlets is another requirement of a good electrical system. For the living room a minimum of four duplex outlets should be provided. The kitchen requires two duplex wall outlets and one ceiling fixture and if an electric range is used, a 220-volt cable will be necessary.

The bathroom will need at least one wall fixture and a wall outlet may also be provided, unless prohibited by the local electrical code. Three duplex wall outlets, or one ceiling fixture and two duplex outlets should be provided in each bedroom and in the dining room.

Each hallway and vestibule should be serviced by a ceiling outlet. For houses of more than one storey, a three-way switch controlling the stairway lighting is required at both the top and bottom of the stairs. The basement should have at least one wall outlet; one ceiling ing outlet should be controlled from the top of the basement stairs.

Any basement outlet which is to be used for an electric washing machine, clothes dryer or other equipment should be grounded or "polarized." Three-pronged plugs are used with polarized outlets.

IN GARAGE

As for exterior outlets, a fixture is required at both the main entrance and the service entrance. A closed-in porch is usually equipped with its own lighting fixture, in addition to the light at the entrance.

An attached garage requires both a ceiling outlet and a duplex wall outlet. If the garage is directly accessible from the be provided at very little additional cost when included in the building contract.

The basement is another part of the house which is often electrically under-equipped.

A single ceiling fixture will not normally give sufficient light for the stairway, the furnace area, the washing or working area, and the storage space. Every basement has its own lighting problems, but as a general rule there should be an electrical fixture for every 300 square feet of basement floor area. This does not include extra fixtures needed for special work areas.

A single duplex outlet may prove insufficient to take care of basement plug-in needs. The use of an extension cord in a basement, as elsewhere, is a poor substitute for additional outlets. Not only are they unsatisfactory but they may also become distinct hazards.

DEDUCT SWITCHES

The number and type of outlets should be clearly stated in the building contract. Note that each wall switch is counted as an outlet. A panel with three switches, for example, will be counted as three distinct outlets. To find the number of operative outlets, always deduct the number of switches from the total number of outlets.

To avoid having an exposed telephone wire running along the walls, have the phone connection wired in at the same time as the electrical outlets. The cost is comparatively small. It is also wise to provide a 220-volt wall plug for the electric range. This is more practical than connecting the heavy cable directly to the terminals on the stove.

Electrical outlets should be safe, as well as located for the best use. Wall outlets in the kitchen should be kept a safe distance from the kitchen sink to prevent accidental grounding. Wet hands and live wires make an unhealthy combination.

For the same reason, outlets in the bathroom should be kept clear of plumbing fixtures, especially of the bathtub itself. In some provinces, regulations prohibit plug-in outlets in bathrooms.

If an outside wall outlet is being installed it should be

Insurance Company Wins Bridge Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Appeal Court ruled Thursday that Toronto General Insurance Company is not liable for the cost of rebuilding two piers of Vancouver's Second Narrows Bridge.

The appeal court set aside a judgment for $350,102 given in Supreme Court by Mr. Justice F. K. Collins in favor of Dominion Bridge Company Limited against the insurance company.

Great thing, this electricity. Snap in a plug... out pop westerns and musicals, funnynmen and gangsters. Out comes heat, warmth and refreshing air conditioning. Darkness bursts into light. Dishes and clothes automatically wash themselves. Electricity is your genie. Give it the chance; your wishes will be granted.

But take a chance and electricity can be dangerous. Is the wiring in your home adequate for the enjoyment you demand from electricity today, and expect of it tomorrow? DO IT NOW

Keep Winter Employment at Its Highest Possible Level

Now is the time to make improvements and repairs while skilled workers urgently need jobs. Workmen are now available for all types of work, painting, building, repairing, alterations. Have the work done now, during the winter slack period . . . keep business and employment going at full speed! When everybody works everybody benefits.

Seasonal Unemployment Continues Below 1961

During the past month the usual after Christmas lay-offs were combined with lay-offs caused by the severe weather conditions, so that the number of persons seeking work through the Victoria National Employment Office increased by 750 to reach the present total of 4,716.

Through this period the number of women making application for work was 526, bringing the total women on file to 1,707. The number of men affected by these lay-offs was much lower, with only 234 new applications being made, but these brought the total men up to 3,009.

While these figures would appear to be high, they are 1,230 lower than at this same time one year ago, and 1,486 below the peak of 1958.

The greater industrial activity in the area, particularly as it concerns the shipyards and the building construction industry, indicates a very good year ahead.

The construction workers on the NES files are less than half the number usually registered at this time of year, and already there is a shortage of engine fitters, machine shop machinists with a high degree of skill, and steam fitters are also getting scarce.

The weather also had its effect on retail sales and the catering industry, so that the number seeking work in these lines is fairly high at the moment.

However, most employers of this class of worker are expecting an earlier than usual start to the tourist season due to the Centennial Year and the Century 21 Exhibition, so it is probable that a fair number of these will be returning to work within the next few weeks.

If a faucet develops a leak that can't be fixed at once, put a sponge under the faucet. This quiets the drip and prevents rust spots in the sink.

GAIN IN LUMBER SHIPMENTS TO U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia lumber operators shipped 794,300,000 board feet of lumber to the United States Atlantic seaboard last year, about 200,000,000 more than Washington, Oregon and California producers.

The figures were released here by the Pacific Lumber Inspection Bureau of Seattle.

U.S. shipments to the Atlantic seaboard were 594,800,000 board feet from B.C. and 902,800,000 from U.S. Pacific ports in 1959.

The B.C. shipments increased 17 per cent last year over the previous year. Pacific Northwest U.S. producers have called for governmental aid to overcome what they call unfair advantage of B.C. shippers.

Total waterborne shipments out of B.C. mills last year totalled 1,700,000,000 board feet, a 7 per cent increase over the previous year.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Lumber Manufacturers' Association said that prices dropped between $5 and $7 a thousand last year.

Shipments to Japan jumped to 155,600,000 from 1,600,000 last year, making up for decreased shipments to sterling countries.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

Came home this week and said to my wife: "Saw the strangest sight today. Bunch of fellows wearing tams and sweaters, laden down with medals and insignia, walking down the street with brooms in their hands."

"Curlers, likely," she replied. "Must be a bonspiel in town."

"They all wear those funny hats with all the hardware and badges?" I asked.

"Some do," she said coolly. "All part of curling. Good game, too."

I thought of arguing the point but desisted. She happened to be holding a broom. She is not overly muscular but her accuracy is not debatable.

While not a curler, my wife was the last one I should have tried to make light of curling with. A former Prairie chicken, she comes from a family where curling was almost as important as a good wheat crop. Her brothers were incurable sufferers of the disease.

As it turned out she was right. There is a bonspiel in town. The Pacific Coast Curling Association is sponsoring it.

A look at the draw in the Victoria Curling Club produced a few familiar names and some unknowns. Jim Dickson, Wes Young, Gary Leibel are contemporaries previously regarded as fellows who knew what day it is. But there they have been all week, battling it out, sweeping away with all the diligence of Old Mother Hubbard.

Larry Marshall, a more common face around the turf bins, stood stoically behind the glass which separates the curious from the participants.

"You in this binge?" he was asked.

"I was," he said, never once taking his eyes off the proceedings. "Me and a lot of other people."

The Marshall rink had been cold-decked 10-2 by the Ken Sturrock rink. It was hardly a disgrace. The latter, along with Glen Harper, were, at the time, melting the ice and opposition with their dazzling play.

An outsider or anyone from deep Oak Bay wandering into a bonspiel is apt to be thrown for a loss by the scoreboard.

Funny fenderas and slick sweeping are one thing but a curling scoreboard is another.

For instance:

Red 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16

Black 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16

Doesn't mean that the Blacks whipped the Reds 8-5. That would be too simple. In curling the score is read by examining the numerals in the centric strip after the numbers representing the end have been placed above or below them.

In this example the Reds scored five points on the sixth end, bringing their score to seven. They had previously scored a point on each of the fourth and fifth ends. So at the eighth end, the score is 10-7 for the Blacks. Nothing to it really. Anyone who has mastered advanced algebra can work it out.

Part of the enjoyment of watching a bonspiel is surveying the onlookers. Nobody hollers, "Trow da ting right, ya bum," or similar phrases of endearment. In fact nobody hollers.

They sit on their skeddaddles or stand Sphinx-like, staring with heavy eyes through the glass partition. Perhaps their silent concentration is designed in some mystical way to encourage or discourage the travels of a rock.

Particularly noticeable was the lack of women among the viewers. This was surprising because curling involves vigorous sweeping and it seemed likely that the girls would be eager to compare form with the "better halves."

I mentioned this to a bystander, resplendent in cardigan and matching tain. He merely winked. Obviously it meant that a curler is one who never lets his wife see him play. One look at the way he wangled the broom and she would fire the maid, settle down with a book and snap, "And don't forget the corners and under the beds."

After witnessing several ends, it was easy to see that after a week of curling a fellow could get pretty lame from sweeping.

I learned, however, that the boys weren't taking any chances. The place was amply stacked with medicinal preparations for relaxing or reviving drooping spirits. If memory serves, a curler once slipped and crashed on his elbow, smashing it to smithereens. As a rule, though, curlers do not fall while on the ice.

The Stone rink, completed by Reg's brother, Roy, third, Frenchy D'Amour, second, and Harvey McKay, lead, is favored to win the title on the strength of its fine showing in the series. All of the Stone wins have been by comfortable margins.

At Edmonton, Hec Gervais of Edmonton, defending world and Canadian champion, came up with his best performance in the four-day Northern Alberta men's championships and scored a 9-5 victory over Norm Rose of Sedgewick.

The victory, in the final of the B event of the modified double-knockout competitions, carried Gervais into the zone final against Matt Baldwin of Edmonton, three-time Canadian champion.

Gervais and Baldwin met today in what fans expect to be the match of the year. Gervais must defeat Baldwin twice to advance to the provincial final Feb. 20 in Calgary.

Baldwin won four straight to win the A event.

Heart in Right Place Even If He Isn't Boss

Hugh Currie can thank his predecessor, Phil Malone, for a winning start on his second stint as playing coach of the Western Hockey League's Vancouver Canucks.

Malone hustled the Canucks to their first win in 10 games, a 4-1 victory over Los Angeles, Blades Friday night.

The veteran centre, fired as coach earlier this week, scored the winning goal and set up another for the Canucks, in last place in the northern division.

Edmonton Flyers trounced San Francisco Seals 5-1 and Seattle Totems blanked Spokane Comets 1-0.

John Annable scored twice for the Canucks, who outshot the Blades 33 to 16. Bob McCann scored for the Blades.

The 2,355 fans at Vancouver gave Malone frequent rounds of applause. Club directors turned the coaching job over to Currie Wednesday, the day after the Canucks dropped their ninth straight game to match a team record set 10 years ago.

Youthful Quartet Sparkles in 'Spiel

Aggregate Chase Wide-Open Affair

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The giants stumbled Friday and a youthful Victoria rink came around to point out that there is more significance to curling victories than can be found on the scoreboard.

While well-known veterans like Duncan's Glen Harper and Gar Taylor bowed out of the Pacific Coast Curling Association's bonspiel scene, the young Roger Pick rink barged into the thick of the aggregate race.

The more significant aspect of Pick's advance into the prizes in two events can be found by looking far beyond the scoreboard.

Every year, new faces pop up to be regarded as threats in future years. A number of defeated rinks agree that this quartet—which averages only 19 years in age—is one of them.

LESSON FOR DAD

Skipped by 21-year-old Bud Taylor, the rink has 19-year-old Pick at third, Bob McPherson, 18, at second, and Glen Ashby, also 18, leading.

They showed their youthful enthusiasm in an afternoon match. Prizes were furthest in their mind when they played Gar Taylor, Bud's dad. And let it be known that old dad learned a lesson—12-4.

The young rink also displayed finesse and know-how. They showed that on the late draw Friday when they defeated Frank Hickey of Port Alberni, 9-8, to reach the final of the "B" primary.

Taylor's last rock, double takeout won it.

The Pick rink also reached the semi-finals of the grand challenge event. They did that by defeating another well-regarded Victoria rink entered by Jim Dickson.

The youngsters marched right into contention for the grand aggregate. Heading into today's rounds, they sported a 6-1 win-loss record along with Vancouver's Bud Ford.

HARPER BOUNCED

Sharing the lead in the wide-open aggregate race were Ken Sturrock, Gordie Moore and Norm Richardson, all of Victoria. All were 7-1.

All circumstances considered, any one of the five rinks can be called up to claim the aggregate prize when the playoffs are held. The playoffs are scheduled for tomorrow at the Victoria Curling Club.

Unbeaten going into Friday's draws, both Harper and Sturrock fell. Harper was bounced right out of the bonspiel—and out of the prizes—when he lost to Ford and Hickey, both by 7-5 counts.

Sturrock was dropped by Moore, 9-5, in an extra end.

Pick's rink was one of five that was still eligible this morning to win two events.

Also gunning for prizes in two events were quartets skipped by Vancouver's Arden Brown, Don MacRae of Nanaimo and Victoria's D. Kirby Moysey and Eric Bullock.

Sturrock, Richardson, MacRae and Ford played off this afternoon in the grand challenge semi-finals.

SENIORS' EVENT

Four rinks still remained unbeaten in the seniors' event. They were A. B. Lord of Seattle, Dr. Albert Walkey of Hamilton, Ont., Dick Thompson and Max Zabel of Victoria. All were in the fours of the "A" event.

Guy Philip of Chilliwack, Ken Smith of Vancouver, Bob McLellan of Duncan and Victoria's Art Jeffery were "B" event semi-finalists.

Also to be decided today was the International Tankard. The special event, match-in-six PCCA teams against six from the Pacific States, was a co-sponsor heading into today's final six games.

Canadian teams took a nine-shot lead, 52-43, after Thursday's first six games and Friday's matches ended in a tie, 47-47.

NAVY WINS AGAIN

Vikings Stumble; Chiefs Pad Lead

Victoria College Vikings have flubbed their big chance to get back into the running for honors in the Esquimalt and District Hockey League.

Playing in the last of the four-point games scheduled to make up their absence at Christmas examination and vacation time, Vikings dropped a 3-0 verdict to Port Alberni Chiefs Friday night at Esquimalt sports centre.

A College victory, combined with Army's 6-3 defeat by Navy Friday, would have left Chiefs, Vikings and Army deadlocked for the lead. But now Chiefs are four up on Army, and Vikings are only four ahead of the surging sailors, who tackle Vikings next Friday.

Chiff-Uhren was again the Navy star, scoring two goals and assisting on two others. Uhren now has tallied nine goals in four games.

Goalie Ron Griffiths sparked the Chiefs, blocking 33 Viking shots.

Cougars Drop Puck Protest

Peace has returned to the Vancouver Island junior hockey front.

Victoria Cougars have withdrawn the protest they lodged after losing Wednesday's Island junior "A" playoff game to Esquimalt Bruins.

Club officials, who based the protest on the fact that some Esquimalt players were not in possession of Canadian Amateur Hockey Association cards, withdrew the protest on verbal assurance from CAHA officials that the cards are in possession of the registrar.

CURLING CUES

By MATT BALDWIN
Three-time Canadian Champion

We have not yet discussed the manly art of sweeping. I say "manly" advisedly because I have seen very few from the distaff side really able to "get with it."

Don't get too mad now, girls. It isn't because you do not actually possess the ability. Rather it's because it is hard work, and, fortunately for us mere males most of you do not have the muscles for it.

But then again, we have our muscular he-men who also do not do justice to the art of sweeping. Don't panic, though. It really isn't so tough as many a curler makes it on himself.

Let us agree that there is something to sweeping that requires skill as well as muscles. So let's see if we can help a few people by analyzing the accepted method for correct sweeping.

But you also will probably notice that one curler's left hand has grasped the broom from the top, while another holds it from beneath.

Either of the left-hand positions is acceptable, depending invariably upon the most comfortable feeling for the sweeper.

No Twist, Dad, Try the Two-Step

A sideways leg motion carries you down the ice. While sweeping is not easily come by for everyone and is not easily explained on paper, there is a definite rhythm between the sideways and the sweeping motions.

Perhaps your leg movements could be best described as a two-step. You stride sideways (or should we say slide a stride?) then bring your other foot up to meet the first. Then just keep repeating the sequence. Maybe it isn't so much fun as on a ballroom floor with something else than a broomstick in your hands, but it doesn't have to be a drudge, either. Get some co-ordination into your movements, and you will find that sweeping isn't such a formidable chore, after all.

There is really nothing more colorful in curling than two good sweepers bringing a rock down the ice with broom and body in perfect rhythm, beautifully synchronized.

You may notice that I have not presented any prodigious claims as to what proficient sweeping may do for a rock. This will always be the subject of great controversy, and while I may not entirely agree with certain extravagant claims, I certainly concede that sweeping contributes a great deal to the game, both mentally and physically.

At some later date, we will discuss some theories on just what sweeping does accomplish.

Claremont Club Out of Running

One more team has skidded out of the running, but playoff positions in the Inter-High School Senior Boys' Basketball League won't be decided until next week's final games of the regular schedule.

Oak Bay Greens and Victoria High Totems, both sailing along with seven-game victory streaks, clash head-on at Oak Bay next Saturday in a battle to decide first place.

Esquimalt Dockers, four points back of the front runners, are assured of another of the four playoff spots, but may be forced to share the third position with St. Louis College Shamrocks, who are only two points further back.

On the other hand, the Shamrocks need a win in next week's windup tussles to be certain of retaining their two-point edge over Mount View Hornets.

FIRST VICTORY

Claremont's last hopes of grabbing one of the playoff places went crashing Friday night at Belmont. In its final game of the schedule, Claremont was upset 51-45 by Belmont Braves.

ARCHIE MOORE

STRIPPED OF CROWN ARCH THREATENS SUIT

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York State Athletic Commission stripped ancient Archie Moore of his tattered light-heavyweight crown Friday and directed Harold Johnson, the National Boxing Association's champion from Philadelphia, and Doug Jones, the No. 2 contender from New York to sign for a title fight.

Johnson, 33, and Jones, 24, probably will meet in the Philadelphia Arena in May, it was learned.

The 45-year-old Moore, in San Diego, Calif., promptly threatened to sue the commission for its decision and write a letter of protest to Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York.

New York followed the example of the NBA, which withdrew its recognition from Moore about a year ago. Both the NBA and the New York group require light-heavyweight champions to defend every six months.

CHEVROLET

CLASSICAL STYLE. There's bright-eyed eagerness — and a dash of regal distinction in Chevrolet's rich new style for '62. A wonderful blend for a remarkable car. It's the popular look — the favorite of more Canadians... proven by its leadership in sales.

HANDLING EASE THAT'S EXCEPTIONAL.
One trip downtown and you know that Chevrolet has the smooth, easy handling you've been looking for. Due in part to its Ball-Race steering gear that almost eliminates friction.

EXCITING NEW PERFORMANCE. Pick your economy — pick your power! Chevrolet offers a tremendous choice: six engines that range from a 135 hp gas miser to an all-out performer that boasts 409 horses! Also, your choice of 4 transmissions.

VALUE NO OTHER CAR CAN MATCH. Automotive value has two categories: Chevrolet and all others. Unbeatable from try-out to trade-in, Chevrolet is your best buy bar none in the showroom, and your best sale bar none at trade-in time.

IDE THAT'S "JET-SMOOTH". Superior suspension design is the key — and Chevrolet's got it! Four big coil springs level bumps to molehill size — and then vibration is dampened at 725 insulating and cushioning points. What's left? Jet-smooth ride! And who could ask for more!

OPEN SPACES FOR COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE. If you're high, wide and handsome... even if you have five friends along, Chevrolet pampers you — with space to spare. Gives more easy-to-reach room in the trip-sized trunk, too.

LUXURIOUSLY APPOINTED. Other cars may be as luxurious as Chevrolet — but only if they cost much, much more. That's a benefit of leadership: more Chevrolets made... more opportunity to give you more for your money.

EXTRAS THAT ARE STANDARD EQUIPMENT. Every model of Chevrolet comes complete with such quality extras as electric windshield wipers, deluxe steering wheel, foam-cushioned front seat, front armrests, dual sun visors, cigarette lighter, glove box lock and crank-operated ventilpanes — at no extra cost!

Whitewall tires optional at extra cost

Copper Market In Japan Holds B.C. Interest

By GORDON BELL
Times Business Editor

With the present boom in B.C.'s mining activity so closely tied to the Japanese market—particularly with regard to copper and iron ore—recent statistical surveys of that country's future demands for these minerals provide a basis for considerable optimism. It was reported here a month ago that Japanese surveys of iron ore needs by 1970 indicated that imports would be quadrupled from the present rate of 10 to 12 million tons yearly to 45-48 million tons. There seems to be no reason why B.C. iron ore concentrates should not find a ready market in this expansion.

Now a Japanese industrial survey of copper needs has appeared which shows that imports of this metal will increase steadily and will hit 720,000 tons yearly by 1970. Latest available statistics on Japanese use of copper are for 1960 when industry absorbed 300,000 tons. If the 1970 requirements have been correctly estimated, the increase will be almost 250 per cent.

This rate of expansion would almost guarantee a long-term market for many more B.C. copper operations than the relatively small number now in production or about to go into production.

Rapid development of the Boundary Lake oil field in northeastern B.C. to supply the Western Pacific pipeline is proving an embarrassment to Alberta oil conservation authorities.

Although the largest part of the field is in B.C., the oil reserves just across the border in Alberta are considerable and the Alberta officials have spotted the danger that oil from the Alberta reservoirs may be drained off into the B.C. producing wells.

The Alberta conservation board has announced it will shortly set well spacing rules for the area under its jurisdiction and it is expected that Imperial Oil Ltd. and Pan American Petroleum Corp., the two major oil rights holders in the field, will announce plans soon.

However, the problem will remain as to what will be done with the oil produced. Logical outlet would be through the Western Pacific line to Vancouver, but there's no guarantee B.C. would allow Alberta oil in when it is hastening development of its own wells.

Although Victoria building starts hit a slowdown last month, the January report on housing for this area, issued by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, continues to show a bright picture.

In fact, for the whole Greater Victoria region, January starts were up by a whopping 124 per cent compared with the same month last year—a gain in which almost every area had a share.

Saanich led the way with a total of 64 starts followed by Victoria, 23; Sidney, 10; View Royal, 9; Oak Bay, 7; Esquimalt, 5; North Saanich, 3; and Central Saanich, 2.

Number of completed, unoccupied houses in Greater Victoria during January—usually a good index of demand—was 38, compared with 47 in December and 49 in January last year.

A million-dollar expansion program is under serious consideration for Western Canada Steel Ltd. The program would add a continuous casting system for ingot production at the Vancouver plant and may be started this year.

President G. H. D. Hobbs says long-term borrowing

$4.5 Million Net Earnings For Southam

TORONTO (CP)—Southam Company Ltd. had net earnings in 1961 of $4,508,396 or $1.50 a share compared with $4,319,898 and $1.44 in 1960.

Other 1961 figures, with comparatives for 1960 in brackets, included:

- Revenue from operations, $40,939,960 ($39,704,072); costs and operating expenses, $32,462,733 ($31,241,813); depreciation, $1,021,066 ($1,098,068); earnings from operations, $7,456,161 ($7,364,191); income from investments, $929,016 ($850,678); estimated income tax, $3,815,000 ($3,737,000); net earnings from operations and investments, $4,555,366 ($4,468,106); profit on sale of surplus assets and investments, $253,030 ($231,792).

would be sought to finance the program if the company decides to go ahead.

The company has reported net income for the year ended Oct. 31 of $449,966 compared with $386,423 for the previous year.

Mr. Hobbs stated steel production dropped last year "because of a pause in the growth of our economy." He added that expanding export sales helped keep the plant operating at 100 per cent capacity for the entire year.

Newly established markets throughout the Pacific region are expected to add volume and stability to the company's operations.

Mobil Oil of Canada Ltd. has acquired Royalty Oil Ltd.'s remaining 10 per cent working interest in the Central Foot-Hills Agreement Group for an undisclosed sum. Royalty retains a gross royalty interest in the group.

The group was originally formed to explore a one-million-acre reservation along the foothills of central Alberta and the reservation rights were later converted to 700,000 acres of leases.

Royalty was originally in for 25 per cent now owned by Mobil—along with B.A. Oil Co. Ltd., 30 per cent; Sun Oil Co., 25 per cent; and Triad Oil Co. Ltd., 20 per cent.

Western Mines Ltd. provided considerable excitement on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Friday, moving up sharply from $1.52 to as high as $1.68 at one point, although there was no word of further development at Western's Butt Lake property.

The only report available was a reiteration by managing director J. H. C. Ross of plans for underground exploration in the Lynx zone within two or three months and the information already known that Western was holding informal talks with four Japanese groups which might be interested in buying Butt Lake ore and/or financing further development.

Mr. Ross repeated that indicated and inferred ore reserves in the Lynx zone totalled 334,000 tons of two per cent copper although rumors current say about a million tons is now reasonably sure.

Westminster Paper Company has reported 1961 earnings were increased by 13 per cent over 1960 on a sales increase of 2 per cent and the year saw new records for sales volume and earnings.

Net earnings were $1,146,716 or $1.55 a share over 1960. Net sales were $20,400,842.

Prosperity For Auto Industry

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP)—The automobile industry is racing along the prosperity road at high speed.

If the pace is maintained, it can sweep much of the U.S. economy along with it. Economic well-being in the industry spreads directly to makers of steel, rubber, glass, fabrics and many other manufacturers.

And heavy buying of cars shows consumers are well-heeled and that their purchases will lap over into the entire retail field.

U.S. sales of new passenger cars in January totalled 485,962, compared with 368,900 in January 1961. The total was the best for the month since 1960 were sold in January 1957.

General Motors grabbed 54.3 per cent of the market, Ford 28.6 per cent, Chrysler 9.9 per cent, American Motors 5.5 per cent and Studebaker-Packard 1.2 per cent.

Only Studebaker-Packard sales showed a decline from January, 1961. Its production had been shut down for six weeks by a United Autoworkers' Union strike which was settled Thursday.

START TALKS

Business took heart from the decision of the United Steelworkers' Union and steel producers to begin negotiations on a new contract Wednesday. This early date was agreed upon under pressure from President Kennedy. The current contract expires June 20.

The union let it be known its greatest concern will be job security, which it will seek to attain by a shorter work week and longer vacations.

HUSKY GIANT—Nicknamed "Beetle," this 85-ton machine has been built by General Electric Co. for use in areas with nuclear contamination. It has arms strong enough to punch holes in concrete, yet can thread nuts and bolts and use hand tools. And, it can also handle a swing for Miss Pat Rizzuto while on display at Cincinnati. The device will be turned over to the U.S. Air Force. (AP Wirephoto.)

Heavy Pressure On Canadian $1

OTTAWA (CP)—The government sold $133,900,000 of its reserves of United States dollars during January in the face of increasing discount pressures on the Canadian dollar.

The decline in the government's exchange holdings, to $1,921,900,000 on January 31 from $2,053,800,000 a month earlier, was reported Friday in the official Canada Gazette.

It was the third month in a row that the exchange holdings of U.S. dollars and gold had declined following the heavy purchases during October of $186,300,000 in U.S. dollars.

The October purchases by the exchange fund were made to offset heavy pressures which tended to increase the Canadian dollar's exchange value.

The fund's sales of U.S. dollars since then have had the effect of moderating a decline in the Canadian dollar's exchange value. The January decline in the fund brought the fund below its level at the first of October.

During January the discount on the Canadian dollar increased by more than one-third of a cent to 4 1/2 cents on Jan. 21. Since then the discount has increased farther and Friday the Canadian dollar was quoted in New York at 95 21/64 cents in U.S. funds.

Climbing Industrials Feature

By PETER DUNN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Steadily climbing industrials and spurring western oils featured action on the stock market this week.

As if to indicate that last week's nine-point rise was no flash in the pan, the industrial index climbed even further, more than 10 points.

Much industrial strength was provided by the re-entry of institutional buyers. Last week saw a few sessions with big blocks traded, but they were in far greater evidence this week.

A major transaction was for 8,000 shares of Interprovincial Pipe Line valued at $640,000. Another was for 19,000 shares of MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River, worth $356,000.

Other king-size transactions came in Dominion Tar, Imperial Oil, Abitibi and Royal Bank.

Papers advanced in an almost solid line. Abitibi, which announced a dividend increase, moved ahead $3 to $43.25. Consolidated Paper and Price Bros. each climbed $1, the former to $41.75 and the latter to $53.75.

Steels were also stronger, with expectations that steel firms will do better this year in line with predicted economic improvement.

Dominion Foundries and Steel climbed $1.50 to $63.50 after the company reported its net 1961 profit up 19 per cent to a record. Atlas Steel rose 75 cents to $30.25.

Algoma Steel announced a dividend increase to 35 cents quarterly from last year's 30 cents and the stock rose $1.37 to $51.12.

Motor issues were highlighted by Ford of Canada's drop from $164 to $156 a share after the company reported its 1961 profit at only half that of 1960.

OILS DO WELL

Western oils, rejuvenated by much favorable news, moved on index to three new highs in five sessions. The index closed at 129.15—its highest point since June, 1959, and almost seven points above last week's level.

News of rising oil production and gas output provided some of the impetus for the section's rise. Pacific Petroleum has had encouraging discoveries in British Columbia and the stock rose 75 cents to $17.75. Home Oil B closed at a 1962 high—$14.75, up 62 cents.

Dome Petroleum slipped to a low of $13.00 before moving up to $13.50, unchanged on the week. The company announced the appointment of Col. Russell Ker to the Board of the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Company.

Base metals were fairly quiet with few highlights. Of the big producers, Noranda, International Nickel and Consolidated Mining and Smelting fared best, gaining in a $1.12 to $1.75 range. Although trading was heavy in several specialties, there were few marked price changes. Golds were usually lackluster.

IT'S YOUR MOVE

White checkers, moving up the board, to move and win in five moves is the challenge here. Black has two kings. White one; one of Black's kings is corner-bound. How quickly can you find the winning plays?

Millard Hopper, who originates these problems for our page, entered the expert class at the age of 14.

BATTLE OF BALLOONS

For a hilarious competition at a Valentine party, provide contestants with yardsticks and inflated balloons, and post them along a starting line. At the word "go," each player is to attempt to bat his balloon toward a prearranged finish line. First to reach this line wins, of course. But anyone may strike anyone else's balloon en route to his goal.

ASK HENRY

Attention parents and children! The books Henry will give away are high quality children's books published by Prentice-Hall, Inc., one of North America's leading publishers.

You can win free books for your letters to Henry, the 12-year-old columnist who appears on this page every Saturday.

Starting next week, Henry will award a best-selling children's book for the most interesting letter he receives each week.

ASK HENRY

Dear Henry:

We have a son who is nine years old. Lately he has had a loose tooth and is making a mountain of a mole hill. I think he is making this fuss just to attract attention. What do you think? ANGRY.

Dear Henry:

He probably is trying to get attention. But the point is that he is trying to get this attention because he isn't getting enough now. So from now on I think you should show a lot of interest in him and his loose tooth. HENRY.

Dear Henry:

I'm a girl of 14. I have a little brother who is four. When he does something wrong I try to correct him, but my father gets on to me. Should I try to correct him? W.F.S.

Dear W.F.S.:

Who do you want to correct, your father or your brother? First continue in correcting brother, then correct father. Tell him that a child learns most from his elder sister or brother. For instance, I am teaching my brother all the kindergarten stuff in advance and he is getting more stars than the other kids in his class. HENRY.

Dear Henry:

I'm a girl of 13 and have a big problem. I have secretly been going out with a boy who is 16. We are thinking we might elope next June so I can be a June bride. Do you think I am too young for this sort of thing? UNDECIDED.

Dear Undecided:

There were once two little bears, Jack and Jill. They liked each other very much but were too young to get married. So they quit school and ran away. Jack hadn't finished school so he couldn't get a good job and they had no friends and were very sad. Soon they regretted leaving but didn't dare go home. The maw and paw bears grew worried and paw got ulcers. Then they called the police. Jack and Jill were brought home in disgrace and their families were very much ashamed. HENRY.

Dear Henry:

I am a 13-year-old girl in Grade 8. My dad is the Grade 8 teacher and believes in discipline. He still spanks me like a little kid for such things as going out when Mom and Dad say no, or for swearing. I know it is wrong, but is it necessary to be spanked? JUST WONDERING.

Dear Wondering:

Older kids shouldn't be spanked unless absolutely necessary. In your case you know perfectly well that you have done wrong and you keep doing it. So in your case I would say spanking is absolutely necessary. HENRY.

Dear Henry:

On which subject do you think my son should concentrate most at school? On the one he likes best or the one he hates most? A FATHER.

Dear Father:

If you concentrate on the worst, You can only get better. And if you concentrate on the best, You can only get better. But why not just suppose You concentrate on both?

FUN IN SUN — Inviting swimming pools abound by hundreds in resort mecca of Las Vegas. Ideal "pool weather" last from early spring to late fall.

OF ALL PLACES By HORACE SUTTON

Main Byway Between East, West

TEHRAN — The capital of modern Persia was not very far out of the age of jet trans- formed it into the main by- way between the East and the West. In its sandy bleak- ness it sits, a city in the desert, just under the Caspian Sea, 200 miles from the Rus- sian border.

Sutton

We came thundering into the marble airport where the names on the departure board tell of flights bound for Abadan, for Isfahan, Bagdad and Shiraz. Beyond the terminal Tehran is a grassless city where the streets teem with women who still wear the chador, a cloth that covers head, face and form; with priests called mullahs who affect turbans and beards and flowing black capes; and with men who wear a turban of brilliant green to indicate their claim as descendants of the Prophet Mohammed.

Red double-decker buses run the boulevards and so do donkeys who carry enormous bins of oranges, and both of them pass the corner stands that sell the Iranian's between-meals winter delight, hot boiled beets.

In the endless bazaars where toothpaste and detergents are crowding out tur- bans and water pipes, one can still find delicately painted Persian miniatures and mag- nificent enameled boxes with scenes guaranteed to conjure a dream of an Arabian night. The spice alleys are crowded with beige mountains of dried limes, pressed cones of sugar a foot high, later to be saved into usable lumps.

There is dried balang, like dried apricots for making a delectable jam; and a purple leaf called tongue-of-a-cow to brew a Persian tea.

The bread goes by such romantic names as lavash and sangak, barbari and taftoon, which is itself flat as a flap- jack and one foot long. The national dish is chelo kabab, roast meat and rice, and you go for it to Reghabi on the Avenue Amir Kabir, where the owner has studied in America and is a part-time movie actor with a list of Hollywood friends.

The ritual begins with inch- long pickles tasting faintly of licorice. Then purple onions and raw eggs with the top of the shell removed. The egg is mixed into the rice which arrives golden with butter, and if you are brave you wash it all down with dough, a buttermilk which comes in bottles mixed with soda water.

None of this fare appears on the menus of the better hotels. The modern Tehran Palace, in the center of the city, takes great pride in its chef imported from France, and defers to the local cuisine only in the matter of caviar which comes from the sturgeon of the Caspian and is bigger than buckshot and gray and fatty.

The Tehran Palace has a swimming pool surrounded in the summer by a rare garden of grass, and its suites are air-conditioned and piped with music. Allah only knows what new pleasures await Tehran when the Hilton Hotel, its exterior already finished, opens on its brown hillside plot in the north of the city.

The altitude is 600 feet higher in the northern section of town, and so is the social scale. The British and the Russians keep separate summer embassies here and the Shah maintains a summer palace, and enormous preserve hidden behind high white walls. The palace is only a few yards from the aging Darband Hotel, a temple of white stucco, out of style but comfortable, with outdoor dancing in the garden when the snow-banked hills that rise behind the hotel have turned to brown.

But the emerging northern quarter also sports a new Cabaret Miami and a short order restaurant called the Hot Shoppes, placed alongside a rakish gas station and super- market.

There is a different look in the south of the city, where the smelly sheepskin coats called postoline hang from racks in front of the shops, and melons are piled like green cannonballs and pump- kins are roasted on corner stands. The road to the old capital of Rey weaves through the smokestack spires of the brick factories and the clay is mined from land that was once a cemetery.

The dead are buried only in shrouds, and so it is supposed that tomorrow's brick was yesterday's citizen. At Tehechme All the spring named after the nephew of the Prophet, the rugs of Tehran are washed, then laid to dry on the hillside, making a brilliant patchwork against the bare brown earth.

Little of the ancient Persian culture exists at Rey, which was destroyed by the Mongols in 1220. But the father of the present Shah, who began his career as a Persian Cossack soldier, and who forged modern Persia, chose it for his tomb. His elaborate mauso- leum, copied inside from Napo- leon's tomb at Invalides, is a splendid structure not far from the gold and blue domes and the minarets of the Shrine of the Son of the Eighth Imman.

Not far away, on the road between Tehran and Rey, another elaborate mausoleum is being built. It will be the tomb of the Queen Mother, the mother of the present Shah, and the royal mother-in-law of Queen Farah.

Tehran is young as cities go, for in 5000 years of Persian history, it has only been the capital for the past 175 years. Still it has a certain glory in its palaces, notably Golestan, which is two and a half cen- turies old and maze of mirrors and treasures.

On view is the gilded throne inlaid with 6,000 jewels on which the Pahlavi Shah re- lined in some splendor 160 years ago, not to mention the porcelain sent by Napoleon en- crusted with the Bonaparte pose, an elaborate pagoda- shaped clock from Queen Vic- toria, and a monstrous desk set of green malachite from Czar Nicholas II.

But Golestan has modern memories too, for here the reigning Shah was thrice mar- ried, once to Fawzia, sister of Farouk, later to Soraya and now to Queen Farah. And in Brilliant Palace which adjoins the Golestan, and is itself a dazzling maze of beveled bits of mirror and precious Persian carpets, Queen Elizabeth of England and the Duke of Edinburgh were bil- leted during their state visit.

Ancient Persia is not yet a tourist land, unless one is pre- pared to head for the ancient cities of Isfahan and Shiraz. But it is a way station for global travelers, and passing fascination for those who are willing to get visas and fill out a snowstorm of forms and thread their way through a cat's cradle of regulations.

At the airport there is a caviar waiting on the ice (at $11 per pound) and pistachio nuts by the sackful, and car- pets and inlaid boxes and just about everything short of Per- sian cats. And there are the jets roaring in out of the west and touching down long enough to swoop up passen- gers earmarked for Karachi, Delhi and on, like us, to Bangkok.

Pirate Radio Protest

LONDON (AP)—Bertrand Russell, 89-year-old apostle of nuclear disarmament, barged onto the air Friday night with a pirate radio broadcast defending col- leagues facing trial and de- nouncing U.S.-British nu- clear planning.

Earlier in the day, Lord Russell warned the govern- ment that his ban-the-bomb movement would organize mass civil disobedience if Britain does not reverse its decision allowing the U.S. to use Christmas Island in the Pacific for nuclear weapons testing.

Russell's pirate radio speech was heard immedi- ately after BBC television pro- grams ended for the night with the national anthem. Home screens went blank, but Russell's voice came through strongly. The radio transmission broke down be- fore he could finish.

New Mental Health Centre at Kelowna

A new mental health centre at Kelowna and a new appoint- ment to run community serv- ices are planned by the B.C. government this year.

The 1962-63 budget estimates tabled Friday in the legisla- ture show $51,232 for the Kelowna centre, which will have a staff of five.

The new post is a director of community service, who will get $12,600 a year; no ap- pointment has yet been an- nounced.

NOTHING FOR VICTORIA

But there is nothing in the budget for Victoria's promised new mental health centre, an- nounced at the 1961 session.

According to Health Min- ister Eric Martin plans are well under way, but it will still be some time before the works department, architects, have completed drawings and spec- ifications.

Another document tabled in the House with the estimates, the comptroller-general's report for accounts in the nine- month period ending last Dec. 31, shows the government spent hardly any of the money it allocated last year to im- plement recommendations of the Ross report on mental health.

Last year's budget put aside $100,000 for these recom- mendations; but to Dec. 31, only $2,392 had been spent.

2 Young Sailors Caught, Fined

Two young sailors, caught after a car chase Jan. 29 on Harbor Road, were fined $20 each Friday in city police court for being minors in possession of liquor.

Driver of the car, Ernest Sinclair, 28, HMCS Beacon Hill, also received a $30 fine for driving at speeds up to 50 mph.

Court was told he and his companion, Jerry Tansworthy, 18, HMCS Beacon Hill, were pursued by police on Harbor Road. When they became aware of the pursuit Sinclair doused his headlights and made a run of it.

Improvements To B.C. Jails

General improvements at Oakalla and Prince George prison farms are allowed in new budget estimates for the attorney-general's department.

The total Oakalla appropri- ation in the 1962-63 estimates tabled Friday in the legisla- ture is $2,886,882, compared with $2,575,719 in the last budget.

The extra money is mostly for an increase in staff of 26 to a total of 390; more for food, office expenses, main- tenance, equipment and ma- chinery and motor vehicles.

The same items account for an increase in the Prince George budget to $432,374 from $277,710.

Women 'Blitz' Banks With Phoney Cheques

TORONTO (CP)—A blitz of 300 forged travellers' cheques, passed by squads of women, hit banks in Toronto, Montreal and Quebec Thursday. Police expect more to turn up.

Banks in Toronto reported $21,300 swindled from them as more than 200 well-done forgeries of Bank of Montreal coupons were cashed in less than five hours. Two women have been arrested and charged.

At least $15,000 worth of the bogus cheques have turned up in Montreal and Quebec and police predicted more will be discovered if what they de- scribed as a "near-perfect" op- eration.

RCMP were called in by Montreal police, following re- ports pointing to that city as the centre of the ring. Two waitresses arrested in a Tor- onto bank were both from Montreal.

73 CHARGES LAID

Louise Tremblay, 27, and Fernande Francoise Parent, 27, have been charged with 73 counts of uttering. No arrests have been made in Montreal or Quebec City.

About 40 bank branches in Toronto and others in Mont- real and Quebec reported the cheques were offered by women. Identification cards with a photograph of the bearer were presented in Tor- onto.

Police in Toronto seized $12,000 in counterfeit cheques at the time of the arrests but a third woman and a male ac- complice sped away in a car.

The ring was exposed Thurs- day when an official of a down- town Toronto bank suspected irregularities. Nevertheless, at least 148 cheques were cashed in 295 minutes.

Bank managers reported the swindlers cashed from two to 10 cheques at once, each valued at $100.

PARTY REPORTS

'Houses Intact On Tristan'

LONDON (Reuters)—Cattle are grazing peacefully again on Tristan-da-Cunha, the vol- cano-ravaged island in the South Atlantic, according to a cable report Friday night from Britain's Royal Society Expedition there.

"Party well and set. All island houses intact, except house nearest volcano," the cable read.

The society expedition has established a base camp on the island, whose inhabitants were evacuated late last year. The volcano is "moderately tranquil," the report said. "Smoking from vent. Glows at night."

The Royal Society team will spend two months on the island investigating changes brought about by the eruption.

Ambitious Plan
For Community
Centre Advised

DUNCAN—Delegates to a community centre discussion meeting here this week were advised by Reeve Don Morton of North Cowichan to "think big" in the terms of a building to cost about $500,000.

"It need not be something which had to be done at once," he said, "but which could be spread over several years."

There were 50 delegates from 25 service clubs, sports organizations, cultural groups, and youth associations, who formed a committee to investigate design, cost, and possible government grants.

Jack Prasloski, chairman, said an approach will be made to provincial government officials for guidance and help.

A second committee headed by Denny Hogan and David Williams will examine the same problems in relation to a possible skating area.

DUNCAN—Entries in the 13th annual Cowichan Music Festival here March 9-17 now total 789, and almost half are in piano classes, festival officials announced today.

In addition to other instrumental sections, there will be competition in speech arts, dancing, and vocal classes.

Adjudicators will be Mrs. Phyllis Schult; UBC music faculty, piano; Sherwood Robson, Kitsilano High School music director, vocal; Capt. James Gayfer, music instruction officer, RCN School of Music, HMCS Naden, violin and instrumental; Mrs. Helen Sommer, Victoria, Highland dancing; Mrs. H. Jolley, Vancouver, dancing; Mrs. Lily Harper, provincial adjudicator of speech arts and drama festivals for the provincial education department, speech arts.

DUNCAN—A luncheon will be held here Tuesday to honor Rev. John Watson of London, England, general secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Will Dobson, Don Morton, and Harvey Lowe of Duncan are making arrangements for the luncheon, to be attended by Canada Bible Society representatives from Chemainus, Cobble Hill, Shawnigan Lake, Youbou, Ladysmith, Lake Cowichan, and Honeymoon Bay.

Dr. Watson, who is making his first visit to Canada, will speak at several Vancouver Island points later in the month.

DUNCAN—There are 442 uniformed personnel in Cowichan Girl Guides' Association, according to the report of Mrs. A. Falconberg, district commissioner, at the association's annual meeting.

She said there are 32 leaders, 181 Brownies, and 208 Guides. Balance are association members.

A badge was presented to Mrs. Alan Meynell in recognition of her eight years as president of 1st Cowichan parent committee.

DUNCAN—Fifty-one farmers attended the first meeting of a two-year course in soil study and land improvement to be held here.

They have formed the Cowichan Soils Club, which will be sponsored by Cowichan Agriculture Society. First lecture will be held Feb. 27, in accommodation to be provided by the CAS.

COURTENAY—Vandalism and the high cost of maintenance has been blamed for a refusal to install roadside picnic sites in the Comox district.

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood told the winter works committee the previous sites were removed because of high maintenance costs.

The committee registered surprise that vandalism was serious enough to force a reaction.

COURTENAY—District highway engineer P. B. MacCarthy said today that restrictions limiting trucks to 75 per cent of their legal loads will be lifted Sunday night.

Heavy frost conditions during January caused the limitations to be placed on vehicles using gravelled side roads and poor sections of the Island Highway near Fanny Bay.

He reported that clearing of the right-of-way for the Campbell River-Kelsey Bay Highway is well under way.

ALBERNI—Roy Richmond, Port Alberni, and his son-in-law, Richard Chambers, Alberni, were fined $500 and $5.50 costs each in police court here when they pleaded guilty to charges of pitlamping.

A .22-calibre rifle, 270-calibre rifle, ammunition, and a flashlight were confiscated.

OTTAWA ASKED TO SHARE BURDEN

Fast Action by Province
On Lost Logging Tax Take

Premier Bennett Friday speedily introduced legislation aimed at making Ottawa bear a greater share of lost revenue from taxes on logging companies.

The agreement allows logging operators to deduct from income taxes the amount they pay in special provincial logging tax.

Ottawa's plan is that it would bear two-thirds of the income tax loss, and the provincial government one third.

However, the premier pointed out that B.C. is to receive only 18 per cent of the corporation income tax levied by Ottawa.

Under the Ottawa plan Mr. Bennett said B.C. must bear half the loss in logging tax revenue.

So he introduced a special Act to Offset Levies Under the Logging Tax Act.

It is subject to agreement from the federal government and could be enforced by issuing a proclamation at any date through the cabinet.

"I'm sure they'll agree," the premier confidently told reporters.

Mr. Bennett also introduced a bill to the legislature revising general terms of the overall tax sharing agreement.

Although legislation to allow the new deal was passed at last August's special session, final details of the agreement had not then been arranged. The new bill has no changes in principle, but follows the final federal agreement with minor technical changes.

Nothing 'Specific'
For City Centenary

There is no specific grant for Victoria's centenary listed in detailed government spending for the new fiscal year starting April 1.

The estimates for the 1962-63 budget, tabled in the legislature Friday, show a lump sum of $500,000 for unspecified grants through the provincial secretary's department, which is in charge of events such as centenaries. The same amount was allotted last year.

A Victoria grant could come from this fund.

The usual $200,000 grant to the Capital Improvement District Commission for local beautification projects is included in the estimates.

A new project this year will be assistance in providing recreation centres for elderly citizens. The government has already announced it will put up one-third of any building projects. The estimates include a new allotment of $100,000 for them. Last year there was nothing.

More aid for senior citizens comes in an increase from $660,000 to $750,000 in grants available for housing projects.

City Girl, 15, Makes Mark As Artist of Western Scene

BY JOHN BASSETT

If Penny Butt could have her way, she'd throw the hands of time back to the rip-roaring days of cowboys and Indians.

Because she can't she does the next best thing: reads, writes and draws about them, the latter with such skill it may become her life's work.

To Penny, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Butt, 493 Lampson Street, the life of a cowboy and his horse beneath the open stars is her greatest envy.

Since she was a little girl she's been drawing this life. Her home contains hundreds of horse pictures, models, novels and encyclopaedias.

A natural talent not yet honed, Penny's success with pen and ink has been remarkable for a girl her age.

She has won prizes in the Pacific National Exhibition, been lauded at school, and had sketches accepted by magazines. She is now in the middle of the biggest job of her young life.

"I am doing all the drawings for a novel being written by Elmer Turner, a California breeder and racer of quarter horses," said Penny.

The book is to be entitled "The Little Black Mare," and will include the cream of the many sketches Penny is draughting.

Her commission for the task arose out of a drawing used in the January issue of the Western Horseman. In it Penny had a cowboy rounding up some steers, tight grip on reins and bent to the job at hand.

The exactness of form and breadth of spirit so impressed author Turner that he asked Penny to illustrate his book.

Not limited to pen and ink, Penny dabbles in water colors and oils. She also writes poetry, but only displays it at the insistence of Mrs. Butt.

"I'm a miserable tomboy," she admits, "and one of my best friends is a Texas cowboy who I don't even know but who I write and send my sketches to."

In return for the sketches the cowboy, now in the U.S. Air Force, describes what life on the ranch is like, and suggests authentic western scenes for Penny to draw. They became pen pals after her Western Horseman picture.

The yearning to live the life of the west may pass as she gets older, but Penny doesn't think so. In fact, she's already written what she wants, in one of the poems her mother showed. It's called "Prairie Rich Man" and the last verse reads:

"So what more could I ever wish
Than freedom, work and health,
My cattle and my horses,
A cowboy's bounteous wealth."

LITTLE SUN, LITTLE RAIN

Moist air over Victoria today and Sunday will give cloudy skies with periods of partial clearing, weatherman William Mackie said today.

"There will be some sunshine, but the odd shower too," he said. "The accent will be on clouds."

BCE TAX COMPENSATION

'Stage Set' Says Mayor

Municipal leaders today looked forward to provincial grants and school taxes on B.C. Hydro installations promised in Premier Bennett's budget speech Friday.

Losses in municipal revenue had been feared with expropriation by the provincial government of taxpaying B.C. Electric Co.

Mayor R. B. Wilson said the budget shows the provincial government has set the stage for paying grants in lieu of taxes on government-owned properties.

Details would not be known until later, but Mayor Wilson hoped the Victoria grant and taxes would be large enough to compensate for school losses.

$110,000 GAP

B.C. Electric properties assessed at $2,926,520 were removed from the Victoria tax roll last year. They would have provided about $163,002 in taxes.

Including Black Ball Ferries Ltd. property, taken over by the province just before year's end, the city would have to get an increase of $110,000 in its existing grant in order to break even.

The mayor did not expect

grants in lieu of taxes for all provincially-owned properties.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wentele said he was glad the B.C. Electric taxes would be carried on and hadn't expected them to be cut off.

"We didn't think they'd do anything suicidal like cutting off the BCE payments," said Saanich Reeve Stanley Murphy.

Next to Victoria, Saanich would have had the most to lose if the utility taxes were dropped. Oak Bay and Esquimalt installations are of much less assessed value.

Petition Urges Council to Save Mount View Home

A new petition urging council to keep Mount View Home for aged men open, is being circulated by private citizens. Aid Geoffrey Edge low said Friday.

The alderman who said he is going to continue to fight to halt the closing of the city-operated building, said a special committee, should be set up to run the home.

The home has been under the jurisdiction of the welfare committee.

Band Boys Wanted For 89th Kinsmen Air Cadet Squad

Bandmen, or more properly bandboys, are needed by the 89th Kinsmen Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron in Victoria.

Staff Sergeant E. A. Stannard is calling for 12 trumpet players, eight snare drummers, one bass drummer, one cymbal player and two tenor drummers.

Volunteers must be over 14 years but as close as possible to that age so they have the maximum time in the band before compulsory leaving at 18.

Musical experience is preferred but not necessary and a grounding in basic military life will be given.

Sgt. Stannard said he would be available in the evenings at GR 7-4263.

Wrong Slant Alleged On U.S. Texts

The Chant report on education was accused Friday of painting a misleading picture of the number of American textbooks being used in B.C. schools.

The statement came from J. R. Meredith, supervisor of curriculum for the department of education.

He told a discussion seminar on school textbooks at the convention of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association at Victoria High School the report "lent itself to misinterpretation" in the way it tabulated the origin of school books.

The books were listed with their sources in such a way as to give weight to widely-used Canadian books and to downplay specialized American texts which reached few students.

"It is misleading to give the same weight to basic social studies texts which are used by some 40,000 elementary school children as to a small German reader which might reach only 100-grade 12 students," he said.

"American books are not in as extensive use in our schools as it would appear from the report," he added.

Rising Death Rate of Native Swans Probed

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Wildlife biologists are seeking the cause of the high death-toll of one of British Columbia's most beautiful birds.

Dr. Clifford Carl, curator of the Provincial Museum, said today a strange malady has been killing scores of swans, mostly "whistlers" on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

"Biologists are trying to find out the reason," he said. "There are several theories, but as yet the cause has not been determined."

One possibility being investigated is death from a form of poisoning, such as lead poisoning.

Dr. Carl said the unusual high death rate was first noticed this fall when many swans were found dead at the mouth of the Fraser River and north of Nanaimo.

"They continued to die for no apparent reason," he said. "In this area alone," he added, "six birds have been turned into the museum. Apart from that we have received reports of dead swans being picked up on nearby islands.

One theory as to the death of swans by lead poisoning is the fact that they feed along river banks and lakes where duck-shooting has occurred and ingest quantities of spent shot.

Dr. Carl said biologists are not alarmed yet at the death rate, as the population of whistling swans in B.C. is fairly large.

"It's the trumpeter swan, the largest of the two species found in this province, that concerns us," he said. "It's in danger of extinction."

He said the illegal shooting of swans (they are protected by law) is aggravating the situation.

"Apart from dying from an unknown cause, more swans have been illegally shot this year. There is no excuse for shooting a swan by mistake. It's a large bird and easily recognized."

Game officials said there are 70 known cases of shooting or molesting swans in the last six months in B.C.

Oily Rags Start Hospital Blaze

Orderly Moves Fast To Extinguish Fire

A flame-filled Royal Jubilee Hospital cleaning room was brought under control by a quick-thinking orderly at 10.45 this morning before a serious blaze could get under way.

The fire, started by spontaneous combustion among some cleaning rags, broke out in the old brown shingled office and interne's building situated beside the main hospital building.

Four trucks from the Victoria fire department rushed to the scene led by Deputy Chief John Abbott.

NO PATIENTS INVOLVED
There are no patients in this part of the hospital, although it is used for a Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

The fire was first noticed by assistant orderly chief Frank Milton, who was working in an office almost diagonally across from the cleaning room.

He saw smoke seeping out of the closet, filled with wax, rags, and paper cleaning towels, clouding the downstairs-corridor. He called the fire department.

Orderly Philippe Argieri, 306 Gorge Road, noticed the blaze at almost the same time, but refused to allow the door to be opened for fear fresh air would feed the fire.

He then gathered water to douse the flames.

"The fire was real high in the room," he said later, "but a bit of water put out the papers that were burning."

Said Mr. Milton, "If that fire had just got started, or if it had happened at some other hour, this whole building would have gone up."

An old-nurses' home, it is known in hospital circles as the Annex.

B.C. Doctors Prepare Plan Of Insurance

Victoria doctors will join colleagues from all over the province to present what is expected to be a scheme of extended voluntary insurance to the royal commission on health services when it sits in Vancouver from Feb. 20 to Feb. 24.

Their brief is expected to contain an alternative to "state medicine" schemes being urged by other groups in Canada. Labor unions in particular are demanding an all-out medical care program administered by the state, and the Liberals, Social Credit Party, and NDP-CCF have inserted a "socialized medicine" plank in their party platforms.

The seven-member commission under Chief Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan also will hold hearings in Victoria on Feb. 19.

Representatives of the Victoria Medical Society, Dr. J. L. Heffernan and Dr. L. L. Ptak, will join members of the B.C. Division of the Canadian Medical Association to argue the case of the local medical profession.

Eight groups will present briefs in Victoria, among them the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, the provincial government, and the NDP-CCF.

Premises Entered

Two downtown cafes and a house were entered by thieves during the night and a quantity of food and cash taken.

An undetermined amount of money was stolen from the till of the Regal Cafe, 652 Yates Street. Detectives said the premises were entered via a roof ventilator.

THREE HURT WHEN CAR SOMERSAULTS

A spectacular end-over-end crash in Saanich early today sent three young people to hospital with not too serious injuries.

In good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital are Patrick T. Phipps, 25, of 1909 Fernwood, with leg injuries; Miss Elizabeth Peterson, 18, of 219 Cadillac, with injuries to left leg and shoulder; and Wnars Osolt, 24, of 465 Kingston, with back injuries.

Saanich police said the three were in a 1958 model car driven by Phipps south on the Patricia Bay Highway.

The car apparently went out of control near the junction with Claremont before plunging off the highway into a field, turning end-over-end several times before coming to rest.

They estimated damage at about $2,000.

Gas Tank Check On All Trailers

A province-wide inspection system will be set up soon to ensure safety of hundreds of propane gas tanks used on trailers.

Provincial boiler inspector Donald Denham said the system of regular inspection will start in about two months.

Fancy Wrapping On Dull Budget

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Legislative Reporter

It took grapefruit juice-sipping Premier Bennett two hours to read his budget speech in the legislature Friday, but all that was in it could have been disposed of in two minutes.

Its significance can be assessed in sheer weight, the enormity of the total amount to be spent and its technical color illustration rather than in brightness of ideas or novelty of policy.

In short, it was big but dull. Apart from the civil service raise—which may still not be enough to appease government employees—there wasn't a single "goodie."

Although it was more than $16,000,000 better than last year's, the new budget's $356,141,348 was a thin spread of butter over the daily bread of every government department.

The most interesting innovation was the introduction of illustrations: A fine picture of the premier on page two, photos of our ferries in full stream, and a glorious color conception of the Peace River dam.

However, the ranks of government MLAs (or were they mechanical figures supplied by the Royal London Waxworks Museum?) applauded on cue at every significant phrase.

It was not until the last 10 minutes that even the premier himself managed to enliven his oratory, yet the two-hour effort left him hoarse as usual.

But we can't turn up our nose at $356,141,348; a gigantic sum, thanks to the ever-present surplus fund, which is always to be spent, yet somehow returns perennially fresh to bolster new budgets.

How is it done? By cautious revenue estimates, guaranteed to be exceeded; and by optimistic expenditures, bound to be more than needed.

Altogether, it was a budget in tune with the melody of the session so far—rather a plodding refrain.

Restraint—was certainly the theme of the Throne Speech debate.

Even the Opposition could find little zeal for attack. Only two issues sparked any life: pipelines (the assault on Frank McMahon) and Greater Victoria amalgamation (an unexpected intruder).

There are still things to come, however, which might arouse interest and passions.

Chief among them is the legislation to establish the new B.C. Hydro. (Incidentally there was a campaign to rename B.C. Power Commission B.C. Hydro, but it was dropped a few months ago; perhaps this is why.)

Premier Bennett has promised the legislation early next week.

Surely he wouldn't bring it in Monday and take headlines away from the critical reply to the budget to be given by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan?

He has already been assured some of the headlines by his announcement that details of the civil service pay boost will be given Monday.

MONTE ROBERTS

I have been asked to give my opinion on the Nassau incident involving a prominent figure in the entertainment world and her gentleman-in-weighting.

I am told there is some doubt that the incident was for real (if I may lapse into the Levistist use of the English language).

The rumor is to the effect that the well-publicized overnight sojourn on a coral island was intended to be just that:

Well-publicized.

The question, in brief, is whether or not this escape from a fate worse than death (namely, being nibbled by sharks) was a press agent stunt, such as having jewels stolen or being born in a log cabin.

The answer is, of course not.

The Nassau effort was much too corny to have been dreamed up by a press agent.

Any press agent worth his commission would realize the stunt was so unbelievable no newspaper or wire service would go for it.

That is why what happened to the prominent Hollywood figure must have actually HAPPENED, and accidentally, at that, because no press agent . . .

wait a minute.

Unless the press agent figured the stunt was so corny nobody would think it a stunt?

I wish I had not been asked to give my opinion. But I will state, flatly, that the only thing slicker than a good press agent is two press agents.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

The P & O-Orient cruise ship Canberra has run into heavy weather in the Pacific, and her arrival in B.C. waters will be delayed about five hours.

Originally scheduled to arrive off Dallas Road, between 5 and 6 p.m. Sunday, she is now expected about 10 p.m., inbound for Vancouver.

The city's new tickets for parking meter violations will not be used for another 10 days, Ald. Michael Griffin said Friday.

The new tickets will give violators a choice of paying a $1 fine within three days or appearing in court.

At present they are given two days to pay $1 in advance. If they fail, the fine that would normally be imposed by the court, $2.50, can be paid in advance to avoid a court appearance.

Administrative details have to be cleared before the new tickets come into use, the alderman said.

"Decorate now" is the message Jaycees were spreading today to local businesses in an effort to spruce up the downtown for centennial festivities. Blue and gold decorations are available at three outlets only. The Junior Chamber will provide this information and encourage use of them.

Wenda Fisher, 1805 Singleton Road, Saanichton, was elected president of the first B.C. 4-H Rabbit Club at an annual meeting held recently.

Other officers elected were: Louise Peden, vice-president; Pat Buxton, secretary; Reid Fisher, treasurer; Ruth Thullier, telephone convenor; Robert Irving, refreshment; Paula Norman, publicity.

The club's next meeting will be held on Feb. 23.

Dr. Batten was born in England and educated at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland and University of Manchester.

He came to Victoria on a fellowship, "and I liked it so well I decided to stay permanently."

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Rev. Bruce Gray Returns as Guest

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Rev. Dr. Bruce Gray, an assistant minister at First United Church from 1929 to 1933, is returning here from Toronto today to take part in the church's centennial celebrations.

He will preach at the Sunday morning and evening services and there will be a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Gray in the Fellowship Hall afterwards.

Premier Bennett will read the lesson at the Sunday morning service.

During his ministry in Victoria Dr. Gray married the former Mary M. Wallace, whose brother, Lawrence J. Wallace, is now chairman of the First United's Centennial celebrations.

He left Victoria in 1933 to become minister of West Point Grey United Church in Vancouver, after which he was appointed assistant secretary of home missions at United Church headquarters in Toronto.

Since 1940 Dr. Gray has been minister of Kew Beach United Church, Toronto—one of the largest in the city.

Next Thursday members of First United will present a centennial review in drama and tableaux in the church sanctuary, at 8 p.m.

An adult confirmation class will be held in St. John's Anglican Church after Evensong Sunday evening.

Canon George Biddle will preach on "The Glory of God" at the morning service and in the evening on "In the Cloud a Glory."

Pastor's 'Diary' Tells Everything

CHICAGO (AP)—One way to enlighten church bulletins circulated to congregations, a religious journal observes, is to list the day-by-day activities of the pastor.

This, says The Christian Century, a Protestant weekly, keeps church-goers informed of their preachers' doings.

But the Century says a pastor in Iowa, whom it does not identify, made out a similar list with tongue in cheek. This was the result:

Dec. 12—Overhauled auto at 103,000-mile mark. Cleaned two chickens for bazaar.

Dec. 13—Address at Future Farmers of America, "Organic of Inorganic Fertilizer and the Christian Church." Took children to basketball game.

Dec. 14—Delivered posters advertising Christmas concert. Refereed between women fighting about their places in bazaar program's "acknowledgements" list.

Dec. 15—Appeared in court, forgot to write "Rev." on driver's licence.

Dec. 16—Bought bus ticket for Freedom Ride. Bus snowed in. Repaired flat tire.

Dec. 17—Helped thaw frozen plumbing in church. Transported children for Christmas pageant practice. Painted two angels, sanded and varnished crib. Dickered with auto dealer; overhaul did not work.

Dec. 17—Work in study, 3 a.m. to 4 a.m. Preached in own church. Caught cold; missed pageant.

Dec. 18—Read Tropic of Cancer; found it fits inside dust jacket of a John Barclay biblical commentary. Dropped book out of dust jacket while at dentist's. Met with vestry to explain situation.

Dec. 19—Spoke to church federation on "My Inward Theological Growth."

CHURCH PAGE

TINY WESTERN CHURCH—One of Canada's smallest churches is situated beside the highway in East Kildonan, near Winnipeg. St. Mary's Chapel, Chapel, an 8-by-10-foot building that seats about six persons, was built nine years ago by Sam Ludwiczynski, now 85. He says he built it "to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Virgin Mary being sanctified and made a saint." The doors of St. Mary's are never locked and any wayfarer can stop, light a candle and pray in solitude.

RACIAL BROTHERHOOD

Silent Sermon Delivers Word

A silent sermon is being preached in many places today on racial brotherhood.

The method was started by an Ohio man who found it difficult to convey the message by spoken words. He resorted to an unspoken technique.

It has since spread widely, with both Protestant and Roman Catholic groups giving it a boost.

Its basis is a little printed card and a small bronze lapel pin with an engraving showing two hands clasping in front of the Christian cross.

An uncounted and growing number of Americans now are carrying the card and wearing the pin as a symbol of commitment to inter-racial unity. They call themselves "brothers."

Whenever anyone asks about the pin, they can either explain its meaning or merely show the card.

Occupational therapy and physiotherapy offer Canadians an interesting and stimulating career.

Miss Jane Hudson of the University of British Columbia told a meeting of university and high school students in Victoria College auditorium Friday.

Miss Hudson is chief instructor at the Rehabilitation School for Physiotherapists at UBC—the first of its kind in British Columbia.

The first course started on Sept. 5 last when 18 students were enrolled. Next September there will be places for 30 more and eventually the school will handle 60 students.

Men and women between 18 and 35 are eligible, Miss Hudson said, and may apply in writing to the registrar at UBC.

Interest in the annual Symphony Ball, always a highlight on the pre-Lenten social calendar, is maintained not only by those attending for the first time, but by many who have danced at this event each year since it was inaugurated. Patrons of long standing are Dr. and Mrs. J. F. K. English, at right, who made their reservations early for this year's event; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Salter, left, will be attending the ball for the first time this year. Mr. J. J. Camp and Miss Gail Pellett, centre, represent a group of young Victorians who "wouldn't miss" the ball, which is to be held in the Empress Hotel. (Photo by Bill Halkett.)

Hans Gruber, popular conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, June, will have a party of friends with them at the Symphony Ball next Friday evening. Mrs. Gruber is pictured above in a family group with Maia, Jonathan and their twin sisters, Elisabeth on Maia's knee and Tessa in her mother's arms. A painting of Mr. Gruber, done by Myfawny Pavelic, is in background. (Photo by Bill Halkett.)

The engagement is announced of Miss Donna Bell McNeill, eldest daughter of Mrs. Guy McNeill, 2630 Hibbens Close, and the late Mr. McNeill, to Sub-Lt. John Ernest McGee, RCN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. McGee of Guelph, Ont. The wedding will take place in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay, on Saturday, March 3 at 2 p.m. Canon Hywel J. Canadian Stylists Plan Spring Show

When you read this I will be in Montreal seeing the outstanding highlights for spring and summer 1962 from garment manufacturers all across Canada, at the first International Ladies' Garment Workers Union presentation of Canadian fashions to Canadian fashion writers.

Damaske

As a nation we are becoming known throughout the world of fashion for clothes of excellent workmanship, fine fabrics and designs of good taste and it is most exciting to be invited to attend this fashion premiere.

A fuller story will be along in a few days.
On Monday night, Feb. 12 at 8.30 p.m. the Boussac/Paris fashion collection will be presented in the ballroom of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. Original designs from the top Paris houses of Dior, Cardin, Desses and many others will be modelled by two French mannequins flown in from Paris just for this event.

This will be my first glimpse of Paris originals for the coming season and it will be the nearest I have ever come to attending the Paris openings.

On Tuesday, Feb. 13, the Association of Canadian Couturiers will present their spring and summer preview in Raoul Jean Fourie's salon in downtown Montreal. Mr. Fourie is president of the association.

There will be 11 couturiers represented and each will show six designs.

Since its founding in 1954 the Association of Canadian Couturiers has made an increasing contribution to the world of fashion. Canadian designers are climbing the ladder of success and in the world of haute couture the members of this eight-year-old group are Canada's finest.

For the first time since the founding of the association the designers will mix Canadian and imported fabrics. Enthusiastically supported by Canadian fibre and fabric companies in the past, Canadian couturiers will continue to work in Canadian fabrics whenever these fabrics are best suited to their creative need.

Ursula Redwood of Victoria is an enthusiastic member of the association but due to the pressure of work during the period prior to the legislative opening and the State Ball Mrs. Redwood was unable to create the required six designs for this show.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

In Matter of Accessories Rule Is 'Never Too Many'

Accessories are the frosting on the cake, they should not smother or cover us. One of the first rules about accessories is, "Don't use too many at one time." The chic woman wears very few.

Probably the next best bit of advice is to be sure that the kind you wear are right for you. The extremely short or small woman looks strange and weighted down by heavy bags, big hats and chunky jewelry, while the dainty piece of jewelry and the tiny pocketbook are lost on the taller and larger woman.

Remember that a long bag makes you look taller, while a wide bag makes you look shorter.

There are so many lovely scarfs in such varied materials, colors and designs that they are tempting to every woman. However, I do not think that they are flattering to many women. If you have a short neck or a double chin, forget them. You must have a nice, long, neck or a "large dose of youth" to look pretty in them.

Sometimes we forget what a difference a collar can make in our appearance. The same principle holds here. The woman with a short neck should not wear high collars. Any collar should be flat. The round neck is less flattering to the overweight or round-faced woman than the V neck.

Girl Guides

Lansdowne—Annual meeting of Lansdowne District Local Association of Girl Guides and Brownies was held at the Weald Rd. home of Mrs. G. D. Kennedy. Commissioner Mrs. E. A. Hobbs welcomed guides and parents and gave summary of district activities. Badge secretary, Mrs. N. S. Lockyer reported on the number of badges earned; each Guide company and Brownie pack presented reports. Mrs. G. Kennedy gave a talk on the Girl Guide Camp at Leechtown last July. District commissioner, Mrs. Bernard Shaw, spoke to the group and presented Mrs. Millie Smith with her pack holiday pin and Mrs. A. L. Hiel with the 10th Guide company's registration certificate. The association voted $75 to St. Philip's church to show appreciation for use of the church hall. Plans were made for a coffee party in March.

The overweight woman does not look well in an extremely high heel. Heels should be graceful and shaped, but not too extreme. Shoes with ankle straps make the ankle look heavier. These are good for the underweight woman with pipestem legs.

All of these small awarenesses and tricks add up to an extra quota of attractiveness for any woman.

ASTIGMATISM

Nearly nine out of ten people have astigmatism, many without knowing it. Astigmatism causes an uneven focusing of the light rays that enter your eye. The rays of light in one section of a beam are focused at one point but the rays of a section at right angles to this are focused at a different point. Thus a blurred picture or image results. In many cases the image can be made quite clear by a constant focusing of the lens in the eye. This, however, usually causes a great deal of strain, fatigue, soreness of the eyes and frequent headaches. To have comfortable vision and to protect the only pair of eyes that you will ever have, be sure that they are free from this common defect, or that they are properly corrected for it. It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least once every two years.

DEAR ABBY...

Round Robin Invitation!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received a wedding invitation from a friend of mine whose son was being married. My husband said he didn't blame a note. "Say, Mable, this is for the whole family," Abby, and refused to go, so I had to our six children are all married and have children of their own, all living miles apart, and my friend expected me to me. These people could well have afforded an invitation for each family. Was I wrong? BUSTED FRIENDSHIP

DEAR BUSTED: I don't blame your children for not attending. Perhaps you should have called your friend and suggested she send each of your married children an invitation if she wanted them at the wedding. You and your husband should have attended. Why make a formal mountain out of an informal molehill?

DEAR ABBY: When a girl asks a boy to a girl-ask-boy party, is she supposed to pick him up, pay for everything and see him home?

BIG ARGUMENT
DEAR BIG: No. The girl asks the boy if he will ESCORT her. After that, the date is on him.

Confidential to Janet: Marry him anyway. Every med student has a skeleton in his closet.

How is the world treating you? Unload your problems on Abby, care of this paper.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Don't Retire Jewelry—Use a Safety Extension

By PENNY SAVER

It happens all the time, either the chain on a necklace breaks and the only way we can wear it is as a "choker" or the necklace is short and you toss it in a drawer and leave it there.

Extensions are now available with the circular part of the clasp on one end and the latch on the other.

Made with crystal stones the extensions vary in price according to length, from 10 cents to 25 cents. Worth looking into, aren't they?

Elegance has been brought to hot-water bottles. Really, I have seen the most beautiful hot-water bottle covers made in a choice of black, royal blue or red Chinese brocade. Inside is quilted silk. There's a small opening at the bottom fitted with a snap to hold the bottle in place and the top has five hidden snaps. And you'll be pleased to find they're selling for only $2.50 each.

If you have the habit of just dropping your glasses into your handbag, don't. I've found through bitter experience that doing this for any length of time will scratch them and bend the frames out of shape. Besides attractive cases are selling for only $1.25.

The slide-in cases are made of white, gold, red, pale or dark green brocade and are elegant and dainty enough to accompany you on the most glamorous of outings.

They say, "A stitch in time saves nine" and, if you sew a great deal you'll be right in line with the dainty thimbles I've seen.

Sterling silver, some have a gay enamel decor and others a plain silver trim. In sizes to fit, the prices range from $2.75 to $6.75.

Call me, won't you, if you find any of these items interesting. Penny, EV 2-3131.

A WRITER'S DIARY

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

February is the month for murder. But having no victim of my own in mind I have been reading about one of the most remarkable murders of this century, that of Percy Thompson by Frederick Bywaters in 1922.

As a killing it was commonplace and brutal; Bywaters, who was 20, rushed at Thompson, who was 31, in the open street in a London suburb at about midnight on Oct. 3, and stabbed him in the neck with a sailor's knife, killing him at once. There was no doubt who had done it; Bywaters did not deny it, and the murder would have been no more interesting than any other had Mrs. Thompson not been with her husband at the time, and had she not been put on trial with Bywaters as an accessory before the fact.

Edith Thompson was 30, but much younger than her husband in spirit, and his superior in intellect and education. For more than a year she had been having a romantic affair with Bywaters, who was a sailor, and when he was on leave she had committed adultery with him.

This was not difficult as she had a good job in a London millinery shop (a better job than her husband's) and consequently a good deal of independence.

She was obviously not expecting the murder, she was horrified by it, and she remained with her husband's body until the police came for it.

The charge of murder against her was based on letters she had written to Bywaters.

Think It, Say It—Don't Write It

None of us, if we were really prudent, would ever put anything on paper. Many of us are conscious at this moment that there are, somewhere, love letters we have written which would make us look foolish if they should reappear. But to look foolish is endurable; to be made to look like a scheming murderess is quite another thing.

Mrs. Thompson was a woman of romantic nature, whose passion had never met with response from her husband. Her mind seems to have been nourished on popular fiction, and by no means the worst of the kind.

She wrote at great length, ranging in her letters through intimate gossip, gaiety, fierce passion, and wistful doubt that a young man could long love a woman 10 years his senior.

They were remarkable letters, the work of a born writer, and some parts of them were deeply touching.

The New Testament, however, would lose its quality if a Crown prosecutor were allowed to cut bits from its pages and read them to a jury in tones of contempt. That was what happened to Edith Thompson; selected passages from her letters were read, without any attempt being made by her counsel to put them into context, and they were enough to hang her.

Some of these passages seemed to hint at murder. There was talk of poison and of ground glass. But Sir Bernard Spilsbury, who examined Thompson's body, found no signs of either.

The knowledge is strong that Edith Thompson and her lover played a childish and stupid game, hinting at the chances of getting rid of Percy by murder. But Bywaters, who seems to have had some foresight, destroyed his letters, and thus half the puzzle was missing.

Bywaters behaved very well at the trial. He insisted that Edith had never suggested murder, and was guiltless; he committed the crime while crazy with drink. But the judge took the view that Bywaters was a very young man who had been unduly influenced by a bad woman much older than himself, and sent them both to the gallows.

This was savagery, but murder begets judicial cruelty. Further, judges and juries can be very harsh toward sexual passion. Its existence seems to affront them.

What sort of woman was Edith Thompson? The whole question of her character has been ably presented in a novel by P. Tennyson Jesse, called "A Pin to See the Peepshow," in which this case is carefully examined.

The author is a celebrated criminologist, who has also gifts as a psychologist, for in this book she traces the development of her heroine's mind in such a way that we see how romantic dreaming, unchecked by any ethical or religious training, led her straight into trouble.

Her mind was a good one, her practical abilities were above average, but bad education and the narrowness of a middle-class life led her toward destruction.

But it was her literary gift—never exercised except in her letters to Bywaters—that hanged her. Remember that as you write your Valentines.

India's Leader Complex Individual

NEHRU, A POLITICAL BIOGRAPHY by Michael Brecher. Oxford University Press. 254 Pages. $1.30.

Reviewed by J. C. M. Ogelsby

Michael Brecher of McGill University has written an important study of Jawaharlal Nehru. The reading public is very fortunate that the Oxford University Press is issuing sound, scholarly, and yet popular works at a reasonable price.

They have chosen well in selecting this biography of Nehru, for Nehru has not always been understood by the British or the Americans. Those who have not appreciated him could look at the recent attack on Goa and congratulate themselves that they had been right about Nehru all along, but this is unrealistic. This biography shows how complex an individual Nehru is. That he cannot be seen in a strict black and white sense as Dulles might have wished him to be seen; that for all his years of protestation against violent acts he could resort to them, and that he has much to give India and the world are clearly and intelligently presented in an abridged version of a larger work.

Nehru's life has been the history of India in this century. Born into an aristocratic family in 1889, he has possessed the advantages of his background and education, but his work with Gandhi and his own personality have made him an idol of the common people, and India and its people fill the pages of this book.

Nehru, A Political Biography, is, in fact, more a study of modern India than it is a biography of Nehru. Therefore, it is excellent for those who wish to know something of India, and the reader, at the same time, will gain a favorable impression of India's leader.

ART IN REVIEW

By ARTHUR CORRY

Fine Gallery Endangered By Official Indifference

A somewhat desperate plea has gone out from its president, Hugh Stephen, for assistance on the financial situation at Victoria Art Gallery. Both local and provincial governments have been asked for increased grants.

Last year the city of Victoria gave the gallery $2,960. However the gallery was asked to pay $2,700 in taxes before it received this amount. In other words the city gave only $260 in support of one of the finest galleries in Canada.

The province did little better with a mere $1,500 to help battle the budget of

Through the untiring efforts of curator, president, directors, women's committee and members at large, the gallery has been able to meet its obligations in the past.

However, with the ever increasing operating costs and lack of strong government support, the gallery may be forced to curtail its activities, or even to cease operation altogether.

If a dollar per head was given for every citizen in the Greater Victoria area, in this Centennial year, the gallery's problems would be solved for years to come.

One can readily agree with Mr. Stephen that money allowed by the provincial government for cultural development is out of all proportion to that spent on highway development.

Canada's five most outstanding high school artists will be awarded a total of $2,000 in Hallmark art scholarships this year.

This was announced today by Dr. C. D. Gaitskell, noted art authority and honorary president of the Canadian Society for Education Through Art. Award winners will be picked regionally by CSEA judging committees.

Chairmen of the respective judging committees will look after inquiries for application forms and information. Prof. Elmer G. Ozard, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, B.C., is the Alberta-British Columbia regional representative.

The $400 scholarships are restricted to artistically-gifted pupils who at end of the current school year will be qualified to enter a centre of higher learning.

Each applicant must be sponsored by an art teacher and must submit six original drawings or paintings, or both, together with a completed application form.

"To give free reign to imagination," said Dr. Gaitskell, "there are no restrictions on subject or media." All submissions must be in the hands of regional chairmen by April 17. Winners will be announced in early July.

The CSEA's art scholarship program was inaugurated in 1960 when Courtis-Hallmark Cards established a fund to aid young people interested in the creative arts. Three $400 art scholarships were provided. The number was increased to four in 1961, and to five this year.

Biography-History Brings Past to Life

THE AGE OF CHURCHILL, HERITAGE AND ADVENTURE, by Peter de Mendelssohn. British Book Service (Canada) Ltd., 1961. 627 pages. Illustrated. Bibliography. Indexed. $10.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

"I have no hesitation," Churchill wrote some years ago, "in ranking myself with those who view the past history of the world mainly as the tale of exceptional human beings, whose thoughts, actions, qualities, virtues, triumphs, weaknesses and crimes have dominated the fortunes of the race."

Although he qualifies this statement to an extent Carlyle would not, there is much in the life of this man which gives support to the school which, with Carlyle, believes history is the essence of innumerable biographies. Although the author, Mr. de Mendelssohn, leans hard towards the "great man" school, he is not one of the followers despite the title he has chosen for his book.

This is the first of a three-volume work on Churchill, Heritage and Adventure deals with Churchill from his birth in 1874 to his appointment as First Lord of the Admiralty in 1911—a thirty-seven year span during which this remarkable young man established for himself a reputation as a journalist, author, speaker, politician, cabinet minister and statesman.

Yet despite the space given to Churchill's ancestry and especially the pages devoted to Lord Randolph Churchill and his influence on his son, this is more than a biography. It is also the history of an age and an analysis of "one of the most exciting periods in British history."

Read either as a history or a biography, it is a well written, balanced and frequently vivid description of men and

Electronic Snooper

NEW YORK (UPI)—A careful analysis of "The Iliad" by electronic computer has given the world impressive new evidence that the Greek classic is the work of one poet, a Columbia University doctoral candidate reported today.

"The Iliad" and "The Odyssey" are generally ascribed to the poet Homer, but classicists have suspected for many years that more than one author wrote the epics. No facts are known about Homer, though there may be some truth in the various myths about "the wandering, blind, old poet."

James McDonough, instructor in classics at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, reports that an I.B.M. "650" computer has analyzed "The Iliad's" 112,000 words according to their metrical use and revealed subtle stylistic mannerisms that point to a single creative talent.

McDonough prepared the study as doctoral dissertation and is the first classical scholar to use machine computations in a stylistic study. It took him six months to code the problem on the computer and only one day to run off the study. Without the computer it would have taken many years.

The scholar now is interested in making a study of "The Odyssey" to see if it had subtleties of metrical style akin to those in "The Iliad." The epics are believed to have their origins in pre-historic Greece and were already old when they were recited quadrennially at the Panathenian Games in Athens during the Classic Age and as a tribute to the great

"Homer." The computer seems to have a great future as a literary detective considering the number of mysteries and disputes that exist in booklore. Scholars believe, for instance, the "650" could bring new evidence to bear on whether William Shakespeare or Sir Francis Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

A new game has become Victoria's favorite indoor sport. It has superseded Steeplechase, Monopoly and Chinese Checkers as a pastime and is much more stimulating than darts.

It is called Victoria Centenary.

Instead of choosing colors or symbols you choose projects; the target is called a committee and the object of the game is to get your project into the target's inner circle by making the defence retreat under a heavy fire of barbed epithets.

First person to get his project into the inner circle is of course the winner.

Game crazes are highly infectious and, for a while, intriguing. The only trouble with most is that, at least for some people, the ultimate

A Positive Step Has Been Taken

And that is, that the idea of the game is beginning to obscure the reality and turn something that should be a proud and splendid and happy occasion into a mockery.

The general public has had a lot to say for several months over the jumble of centenary planning, and not by any means without justification.

Everything was begun too late; there have been too many inexperienced fingers in the pie; there has been poor liaison between committees, poor public relations, lack of a realistic approach to financing, lack of a properly architected grand plan.

But I feel personally that the time has come to call a halt to the sniping forays. The Centennial committee has taken a positive step by acknowledging its dilemma and securing the services of an expert in the celebrations field.

Indications are now, on the best authority, that in spite of the lateness of the hour Victoria can still have a celebration worthy of its status and history if everyone—and that includes all ordinary citizens as well as committee members—stops being negative and pessimistic and we all pull together.

If enough of us wait a good celebration, full of the flavor and spirit of our own place and its people, containing something for every one to enjoy and for visitors to remember, then we can have it.

But weighty sarcasm at this point can only undermine and undermine. Nothing will be achieved by prejudice, detached superiority or crying over milk that has already been spilled.

An action has been initiated, a fresh grip has been taken

Famed Harp Exponent To Perform in City

The lady who gave special daily lessons to Harpo Marx on his namesake instrument and who also taught a young neighbor named Deanna Durbin, is coming to Victoria for one-night appearance at the Royal Theatre.

Internationally famed harpist, Mildred Dilling, will present a recital under Famous Artist auspices, Monday, Feb. 19 at 8.30 p.m.

Miss Dilling has played all over the world and in the largest continental concert halls. She studied in Paris under the great Henriette Renie and made her European debut in that city.

She has been invited to play on several occasions at the White House, has made many coast-to-coast recital tours and played with all the major symphony orchestras.

The BBC and other radio and television networks have frequently invited her to appear as guest artist. She gave the first harp recital ever televised by BBC and was the first harp soloist to broadcast

As foreman of jury, actor George Rose, right, awaits moment for fatal verdict in British play triumph on Broadway—"A Man for All Seasons."

ON STAGE 'DRY-UP'

A Moment of Horror... It Can Happen Anytime

By JOAN GRESHAM

NEW YORK (NEA)—An actor on the Broadway stage is a vulnerable creature, at the mercy of his fellow actors and his own faulty memory. No one is exempt from what actors call "drying up."

One of the theatre's most monumental goofs occurred during a performance of the current Broadway hit, "A Man for All Seasons."

The perpetrator of the goof was George Rose, the fine English actor who portrays Sir Thomas More in the drama. The victim was Paul Scofield, playing Sir Thomas More who was condemned to death in both history and in the play.

The scene: a 16th Century British courtroom. At trial's end, Rose, as foreman of the jury, stood to announce the verdict, "Guilty, mildred." After playing the scene scores of times, Rose stood up one night and intoned "Not guilty, mildred."

Stunned silence gripped the stage. Scofield lifted his hands and covered his face—a magnificent gesture to the audience, but those who were aware of the mistake knew he was trying to find a way to extricate himself from the verbal trap.

So, Rose jumped up and said, "I mean, guilty, mildred."

EXTRAORDINARY

Recalling his mistake, Rose said later "I am concentrating on the arguments, 'not guilty' is the only possible verdict. I suppose if I hadn't made the correction, we would have gone home a bit earlier."

Paul Scofield's reaction to the moment was expressed with characteristic humor and reserve: "It was most extraordinary."

Lee J. Cobb recalls a similar moment when he was appearing in "The Fifth Column" several seasons ago. He played opposite a woman in love with a younger man. Their scene together ended when Cobb said "I love him too."

"For absolutely no reason, one night I looked at her and said, 'I love you too' he remembers. 'From that moment on, we were playing an entirely different show. I could hear the audience gasp. I shall carry the scars of that experience with me forever.'"

No matter how often a scene is played, there can come a moment when the mind goes completely blank. Richard Burton recalls that it has happened to him several times, but on every occasion except one he has been able to recall the essence of his dialogue and ad lib.

His one big black-out occurred in the dramatic final scene of "Camelot," between King Arthur and a young boy. "I dried up completely," he says, "and all I could think to do was to start speaking."

(B) "TWIST AROUND THE CLOCK" (Capitol)—If you are young—and this reviewer is not—I suppose you might get a certain charge from watching Sam Katzman's 82-minute musical for Columbia, "Twist Around the Clock." It is obviously a quickie designed to cash in on the frenzy that has emanated from the Peppermint Lounge.

The beat I didn't mind. But the lyrics I couldn't understand. However, I don't suppose they were in English—at least they didn't sound as though they were in English. Worst of all was the acting that from start to finish looked and sounded as though it were first reading night for an amateur show to be staged by Grade Six.

Of plot there was little. John Cronin and pal Alvy Moore leave a rock and roll group and are passing through a small town and spot a local dance known as the Twist. They promptly book it via leader Cole and twisters Mary Mitchell and brother Jeff Parker and then try to sell it to big time via talent agency head Tor Avery whose daughter, Maura McQuinn, has romantic designs on Cronin.

(BB) "COMANCHE STATION"—This second half of the Capitol's bill, a color western starring Randolph Scott, Nancy Gates, Claude Akins, Skip Homeier and Richard Rust is much the better of the two offerings.

It tells of Scott searching for his wife, captured 10 years before by the Comanche Indians, and rescuing instead another woman.

Objective of this group will be to bring a number of outstanding French films to Victoria.

Initiating the program will be a showing at the Fox Theatre, of Moliere's great comedy, "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." There will be two presentations of this film on Monday—Feb. 19—a matinee at 4 p.m. and an evening show at 8.

This masterpiece is performed by Comedie Francaise and is the first film ever to be produced on that famous stage.

Tickets are on sale at the Marionette Library.

Forum on Cancer For Women Only

British Columbia's pioneering cytology program for early detection of cancer of the cervix will be explained at a free forum for women only in the Odeon Theatre on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There will be no reserved seats. The theatre will be fitted on a first-come, first-served basis.

A film, "Time and Two Women," will be shown. It will present the vital message that, by means of a simple annual examination, cervix cancer can be virtually eliminated.

After the film there will be a question and answer period with a panel of four doctors taking part: Dr. H. K. Fidler, Vancouver, specialist in pathology and bacteriology; Dr. David Boyes, Vancouver, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology; Dr. Arthur B. Nash, Victoria, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology, and Dr. D. B. Roxburgh, specialist in pathology and bacteriology.

The forum is sponsored by The Victoria Times and B.C. Cancer Institute.

Figures just released by Dr. Fidler, who is director of the cytology laboratory at the institute, show that the uterine tests taken from nearly 85,000 women during a recent 12-month period resulted in detection of 217 proven cases of early carcinoma of the cervix.

Figures are based on a 12-month period ending Sept. 30, 1961, since it requires some four months to verify preliminary findings.

Discovered at this stage, cancer of the cervix is almost 100 per cent curable. At later stages, it is only about 50 per cent curable.

Mother, 2 Daughters Perish in B.C. Blaze

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Dorothy Lyons, 23, and her two daughters aged two and four, died in their smoke-filled home at nearby North Kamloops today.

The family dog also perished as fire broke out in the living room and burned slowly through the floor. That was the only damage.

Milkman Hank Jongerhuis was not at home at the time.

Firemen found Mrs. Lyons' body on the floor of the front bedroom. She is believed to have attempted to escape.

Gilbert Lyons, her husband, was not at home at the time.

Fat Pay Cheque Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francis Gary Powers, the U-2 pilot, apparently will find a lot of money awaiting him on his return from Russian captivity.

Powers testified at his Moscow spy trial that his contract called for $2,500 a month, or $30,000 a year.

He did not make clear with whom he had the contract, but after his arrest he was identified as a Lockheed Aircraft Corporation test pilot assigned to the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

It is now more than 21 months since Powers' plane came down in Russia. Twenty-one months at $2,500 a month is $52,500.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

At a recent service club luncheon George Gregory jocularly backed up his well-known political beliefs with cold cash.

The club's policeman was fining various members for alleged misdemeanors committed during the past week. Coming to Harry Savage, he said, "And you Harry, are docked 10c for sleeping during Mr. Bennett's speech aboard Mv Victoria last Saturday."

Before Harry could reach into his pocket, Gregory had already leaped to his feet, tossed TWO dimes in the fine box and could be heard exclaiming: "Good stuff, good stuff, just what we need more of."

While it may be questionable whether Ald. Lily Wilson got the last word in an argument with Ald. Geoffrey Edgell over closing Mountain View Home, one thing is certain today: she has a "lost" voice.

She lost her voice and went down with a cold following a heated campaign this week to have the building closed.

The B.C. budget was knocked out of the late edition headlines Friday by the double shooting in Vancouver.

Last time crime stole the spotlight from the budget was 15 years ago, when two police officers and a bank robber were shot dead in a grim battle outside the Great Northern Railway roundhouse at False Creek, Vancouver. Finance minister at that time was Herbert Anscomb.

A former Lord Mayor of London and his lady will visit Victoria's centennial celebrations in May.

Sir Callum and Lady Welch will reach Victoria in time for the annual Victoria Day celebrations, May 21.

Confirmation of their visit was given Mayor R. B. Wilson Friday by J. V. Fisher, B.C. agent-general in London.

Partner in a Vancouver downtown motel enterprise is former Victorian Bernie Kinsman.

Born and raised here, he returned to the Island from a sales job to take training at Royal Roads in 1940. He and his father had built the Tudor House in 1932, but it was sold in 1955.

The Vancouver motel will be called the Kingsway. It will contain 73 rooms, a heated swimming pool, and parking for 300 cars.

Several times a week in the Times there appears a list of winners in some tournament or other conducted by the Victoria unit of the American Contract Bridge League.

Quite apart from the fact that they apparently hold a "tournament" every two days, the same names appear every single time.

Either these people are so good they win every time or we are being sent a list of the entire membership of the VUOTACBL.

Dangers to Canada In ECM 'Overrated'

Dangers of the European Common Market to the Canadian economy have been over-rated, Dr. G. R. Elliott of Victoria College said Thursday night.

He and a panel of three other economists agreed that the ECM's effect on Canada's export market will be less than is commonly feared.

The discussion took place at a meeting sponsored by the New Democratic Party in the Newstead Hall.

Dr. Alfred Carlson, associate professor of economics at the University of Victoria, was moderator of the panel.

WCB Appeal Judgment Reserved

The B.C. Appeal Court reserved judgment here Friday on the appeal of a Nanaimo painter against a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board refusing his application for a disability pension.

Robert C. Kinnaird, a Nanaimo painter, asked the appeal court to set aside a judgment of Mr. Justice T. W. Brown in Supreme Court upholding the board's decision.

Kinnaird contracted recurrent eczema while working with a sealer paint in a Nanaimo shipyard in 1944.

CONDITION CHRONIC

His counsel, Tom Berger, said he was dropped from compensation by the board in 1947, but his condition became chronic and he applied for a pension on grounds of a permanent partial disability.

During the hearing Mr. Berger mentioned that B.C. miner Louis Battaglia has been trying for five years to prove himself entitled to a pension because of silicosis.

He suggested the Battaglia appeal might be a counterpart to that of Kinnaird.

The appeal court reserved judgment after hearing from C. C. Locke, Q.C. representing the Workmen's Compensation Board.

SOCCER RACE TIGHTENS

'Spurs Gain On Leaders

LONDON (AP) — Bobby Smith, former England centre-forward, scored in the 37th minute to help Tottenham Hotspur to a 4-2 win over Nottingham Forest today.

It was Smith's first league game since early in the English League soccer season. He lost his form and had been playing in Tottenham's reserve team.

The win narrowed the gap between Tottenham and Burnley, the First Division leader, Burnley, held to a 2-2 tie at Everton, has 38 points from 26 games. Tottenham and Ipswich each have 35 points from 28 games.

CROWD OF 43,000

Smith, 27, a star of the England team last season, got a hero's welcome from a 43,000 crowd at London's White Hart Lane Stadium.

Welsh international winger Cliff Jones headed Tottenham into the lead in the 17th minute. Then 20 minutes later Danny Branchflower, Tottenham's captain, split the Nottingham defence and laid on the pass for Smith to make it 2-0.

Jim Hodge got a goal for Nottingham and made it 2-1 at half-time, but there was no holding Tottenham in the second half. Jones got another goal and left winger Terry Medwin also scored.

Burnley fought back at Everton after trailing 1-0 at half-time. Irish international inside-forward Jimmy McIlroy tied the score in the first minute of the second half. Seven minutes later Ray Pointer sent Burnley into the lead.

TIES SCORE AGAIN

Roy Vernon, Everton's Welsh international inside-left, deadlocked the score again with a 20-yard shot in the 69th minute.

'MOM' WHYTE AILING

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Bert Whyte left by air for Nigeria Friday night shortly after he received a cable informing him that his wife, Mrs. Bertha (Mom) Whyte, has become seriously ill at her jungle welfare home.

Mrs. Whyte, 47, left for Nigeria in June after she was refused permission to operate a children's shelter in British Columbia. In 1959, Ontario health and welfare authorities closed her children's farm, Whytehaven, near Bowmanville.

Pay Boost News Welcomed By Civil Service Leaders

Premier Bennett's announcement of a pay increase for B.C. civil servants was welcomed today by Norman T. Richards, president of the Victoria branch, B.C. Government Employees' Association.

"Any increase is welcome with wages as low as they are," said Mr. Richards. "I do not care to comment further until we know how the increases will be allocated."

In Vancouver, Ab Kemp, director of education for the BCGE, noted that this is the first general pay boost for B.C. civil servants since 1959.

"We are pleased that Premier Bennett has recognized our request for a salary increase," he said. "But the sum announced in the budget does not appear to be sufficient to cover the amount we requested—about $4,000,000."

Leading Baptist Dead

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Dr. F. Townley Lord, 68, former president of the Baptist World Alliance and visiting lecturer at Furman University here since 1958, died Friday night.

"We will have to wait for a report from the Civil Service Commission next week to see how the money is to be allocated."

Premier Bennett in his budget speech Friday said a total of $2,775,000 has been allocated for increases in salaries paid to government employees.

City Girl, 15, Makes Mark As Artist of Western Scene

BY JOHN BASSETT

If Penny Butt could have her way she'd throw the hands of time back to the rip-roaring days of cowboys and Indians.

Because she can't she does the next best thing: reads, writes and draws about them, the latter with such skill it may become her life's work.

To Penny, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Butt, 493 Lampson Street, the life of a cowboy and his horse beneath the open stars is her greatest envy.

Since she was a little girl she's been drawing this life. Her home contains hundreds of horse pictures, models, novels and encyclopaedias.

A natural talent not yet honed, Penny's success with pen and ink has been remarkable for a girl her age.

She has won prizes in the Pacific National Exhibition, been lauded at school, and had sketches accepted by magazines. She is now in the middle of the biggest job of her young life.

"I am doing all the drawings for a novel being written by Elmer Turner, a California breeder and racer of quarter horses," said Penny.

The book is to be entitled "The Little Black Mare," and will include the cream of the many sketches Penny is draughting.

Her commission for the task arose out of a drawing used in the January issue of the Western Horseman. In it Penny had a cowboy rounding up some steers, tight grip on reins and bent to the job at hand.

The exactness of form and breadth of spirit so impressed author Turner that he asked Penny to illustrate his book.

Not limited to pen and ink, Penny dabbles in water colors and oils. She also plays it at the insistence of Mrs. Butt.

"I'm a miserable tomboy," she admits, "and one of my best friends is a Texas cowboy who I don't even know but who I write and send my sketches to."

In return for the sketches the cowboy, now in the U.S. Air Force, describes what life on the ranch is like, and suggests authentic western scenes for Penny to draw. They became pen pals after her Western Horseman picture.

The yearning to live the life of the west may pass as she gets older, but Penny doesn't think so. In fact, she's already written what she wants, in one of the poems her mother showed.

It's called "Prairie Rich Man" and the last verse reads:

"So what more could I ever wish Than freedom, work and health.

My cattle and my horses, A cowboy's bounteous wealth."

"There will be some sunshine, but the odd shower too," he said. "The accent will be on clouds."

BCE TAX COMPENSATION

'Stage Set' Says Mayor

Municipal leaders today looked forward to provincial grants and school taxes on B.C. Hydro installations promised in Premier Bennett's budget speech Friday.

Losses in municipal revenue had been feared with expropriation by the provincial government of taxpaying B.C. Electric Co.

Mayor R. B. Wilson said the budget shows the provincial government has set the stage for paying grants in lieu of taxes on government-owned properties.

Details would not be known until later, but Mayor Wilson would have the most to lose if the utility taxes were dropped. Oak Bay and Esquimalt installations are of much less assessed value.

$110,000 GAP

B.C. Electric properties assessed at $2,926,520 were removed from the Victoria tax roll last year. They would have provided about $163,000 in taxes.

Including Black Ball Ferries Ltd. properties, the city would have lost $110,000 in its existing grant in order to break even.

The mayor did not expect grants in lieu of taxes for all provincially-owned properties. Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtz said he was glad the B.C. Electric taxes would be carried on and hadn't expected them to be cut off.

"We didn't think they'd do anything suicidal like cutting off the BCE payments," said Saanich Reeve Stanley Murphy.

Next to Victoria, Saanich would have the most to lose if the utility taxes were dropped. Oak Bay and Esquimalt installations are of much less assessed value.

Petition Urges Council to Save Mount View Home

A new petition urging council to keep Mount View Home for aged men open, is being circulated by private citizens.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgell said Friday.

The alderman who said he is going to continue to fight to halt the closing of the city-operated building, said a special committee, should be set up to run the home.

The home has been under the jurisdiction of the welfare committee.

Band Boys Wanted For 89th Kinsmen Air Cadet Squad

Bandmen, or more properly bandsboys, are needed by the 89th Kinsmen Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron in Victoria.

Staff Sergeant E. A. Stannard is calling for 12 trumpet players, eight snare drummers, one bass drummer, one cymbal player and two tenor drummers.

Volunteers must be over 14 years but as close as possible to that age so they have the maximum time in the band before compulsory leaving at 18.

Musical experience is preferred but not necessary and a grounding in basic military life will be given.

S/Sgt. Stannard said he would be available in the evenings at GR 7-4263.

Wrong Slant Alleged On U.S. Texts

The Chant report on education was accused Friday of painting a misleading picture of the number of American textbooks being used in B.C. schools.

The statement came from J. R. Meredith, head of the book purchasing office in the department of education.

He told a discussion seminar on school textbooks at the convention of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association at Victoria High School the report "lent itself to misinterpretation" in the way it tabulated the origin of school books.

The books were listed with their sources in such a way as to give weight to widely-used Canadian basic texts and specialized American texts which reached few students.

"It is misleading to give the same weight to basic social studies texts which are used by some 40,000 elementary school children as to a small German reader which might reach only 100 grade 12 students," he said.

"American books are not as extensive as in our schools as it would appear from the report," he added.

ORNITHOLOGISTS ALARMED

Rising Death Rate of Native Swans Probed

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Wildlife biologists are seeking the cause of the high death toll of one of British Columbia's most beautiful birds.

Dr. Clifford Carl, curator of the Provincial Museum, said today a strange malady has been killing scores of swans, mostly "whistlers" on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

"Biologists are trying to find out the reason," he said. "There are several theories, but as yet the cause has not been determined."

One possibility being investigated is death from a form of poisoning, such as lead poisoning.

Dr. Carl said the unusual high death rate was first noticed this fall when many swans were found dead at the mouth of the Fraser River and north of Nanaimo.

"They continued to die for no apparent reason," he said. "In this area alone," he added, "six birds have been turned into the museum. Apart from that, we have received reports of dead swans being picked up on nearby islands.

One theory as to the death of swans by lead poisoning is the fact that they feed along river banks and lakes where duck-shooting has occurred and ingest quantities of spent shot.

Dr. Carl said biologists are not alarmed yet at the death rate as the population of whistling swans in B.C. is fairly large.

"It's the trumpeter swan, the largest of the two species found in this province, that concerns us," he said. "It is in danger of extinction."

He said the illegal shooting of swans (they are protected by law) is aggravating the situation.

"Apart from dying from an unknown cause, more swans have been illegally shot this year. There is no excuse for shooting a swan by mistake. It's a large bird and easily recognized."

Game officials said there are 70 known cases of shooting or molesting swans in the last six months in B.C.

Oily Rags Start Hospital Blaze

Orderly Moves Fast To Extinguish Fire

A flame-filled Royal Jubilee Hospital cleaning room was brought under control by a quick-thinking orderly at 10.45 this morning before a serious blaze could get under way.

The fire, started by spontaneous combustion among some cleaning rags, broke out in the old brown shingled office and interne's building situated beside the main hospital building.

Four trucks from the Victoria fire department rushed to the scene led by Deputy Chief John Abbott.

NO PATIENTS INVOLVED
There are no patients in this part of the hospital, although it is used for a Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

The fire was first noticed by assistant orderly chief Frank Milton, who was working in an office almost diagonally across from the cleaning room.

He saw smoke seeping out of the closet, filled with wax, rags, and paper cleaning towels, clouding the downstairs corridor. He called the fire department.

Orderly Phillip Argieri, 306 Gorge Road, noticed the blaze at almost the same time, but refused to allow the door to be opened for fear fresh air would feed the fire.

He then gathered water to douse the flames.

"The fire was real high in the room," he said later, "but a bit of water put out the papers that were burning."

Said Mr. Milton, "If that fire had just got started, or if it had happened at some other hour, this whole building would have gone up."

An old nurse's home, known in hospital circles as "the Annex."

B.C. Doctors Prepare Plan Of Insurance

Victoria doctors will join colleagues from all over the province to present what is expected to be a scheme of extended voluntary insurance to the royal commission on health services when it sits in Vancouver from Feb. 20 to Feb. 24.

Their brief is expected to contain an alternative to "state medicine" schemes being urged by other groups in Canada. Labor unions in particular are demanding an all-out medical care program administered by the state, and the Liberals, Social Credit Party, and NDP-CCF have inserted a "socialized medicine" plank in their party platforms.

The seven-member commission under Chief Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan also will hold hearings in Victoria on Feb. 19.

Representatives of the Victoria Medical Society, Dr. J. L. Heffernan and Dr. L. L. Ptak, will join members of the B.C. Division of the Canadian Medical Association to argue the case of the local medical profession.

Eight groups will present briefs in Victoria, among them the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, the provincial government, and the NDP-CCF.

Premises Entered

Two downtown cafes and a house were entered by thieves during the night and a quantity of food and cash taken.

An undetermined amount of money was stolen from the till of the Regal Cafe, 632 Yates Street. Detectives said the premises were entered via a roof ventilator.

THREE HURT WHEN CAR SOMERSAULTS

A spectacular end-over-end crash in Saanich early today sent three young people to hospital with not too serious injuries.

In good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital are Patrick T. Phipps, 25, of 1909 Fernwood, with leg injuries; Miss Elizabeth Peterson, 18, of 219 Cadillac, with injuries to left leg and shoulder; and Wnars Osoit, 24, of 465 Kingston, with back injuries.

Saanich police said the three were in a 1958 model car driven by Phipps south on the Patricia Bay Highway.

The car apparently went out of control near the junction with Claremont before plunging off the highway into a field, turning end-over-end several times before coming to rest.

They estimated damage at about $2,000.

Gas Tank Check On All Trailers

A province-wide inspection system will be set up soon to ensure safety of hundreds of propane gas tanks used on trailers.

Provincial boiler inspector Donald Denham said the system of regular inspection will start in about two months.

Fancy Wrapping On Dull Budget

By FRANK RUTTER

It took grapefruit juice-sipping Premier Bennett two hours to read his budget speech in the legislature Friday, but all that was in it could have been disposed of in two minutes.

Its significance can be assessed in sheer weight, the enormity of the total amount to be spent and its Technicolor illustration rather than in brightness of ideas or novelty of policy.

In short, it was big, dull. Apart from the civil service raise which may still not be enough to appease government employees, there wasn't a single "goodie."

Although it was more than $16,000,000 better than last year's, the new budget's $356,141,348 was a thin spread of outer over the daily bread of every government department.

The most interesting innovation was the introduction of illustrations: A fine picture of the premier on page two, photos of our ferries in full stream, and a glorious color conception of the Peace River dam.

However, the ranks of government MLAs (or were they mechanical figures supplied by the Royal London Waxworks Museum?) applauded on cue at every significant phrase.

It was not until the last 10 minutes that even the premier himself managed to enliven his oratory, yet the two-hour effort left him hoarse as usual.

But we can't turn up our nose at $356,141,348; a gigantic sum, thanks to the ever-present surplus fund, which is always to be spent, yet somehow returns perennially fresh to bolster new budgets.

How is it done? By cautious revenue estimates, guaranteed to be exceeded; and by optimistic expenditures, bound to be more than needed.

Altogether, it was a budget in tune with the melody of the session so far—rather a plodding refrain.

Restraint was certainly the theme of the Throne Speech debate.

Even the Opposition could find little zeal for attack. Only two issues sparked any life: pipelines (the assault on Frank McMahon) and Greater Victoria amalgamation (an unexpected intruder).

There are still things to come, however, which might arouse interest and passions.

Chief among them is the legislation to establish the new B.C. Hydro. Essentially there was a campaign to rename B.C. Power Commission B.C. Hydro, but it was dropped a few months ago; perhaps this is why.

Premier Bennett has promised the legislation early next week.

Surely he wouldn't bring it in Monday and take headlines away from the critical reply to the budget to be given by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan?

He has already been assured some of the headlines by his announcement that details of the civil service pay boost will be given Monday.

MONTE ROBERTS

I have been asked to give my opinion on the Nassau incident involving a prominent figure in the entertainment world and her gentleman-in-waiting.

I am told there is some doubt that the incident was for real (if I may lapse into the Lewistist use of the English language).

The rumor is to the effect that the well-publicized overnight sojourn on a coral island was intended to be just that:

Well-publicized.

The question, in brief, is whether or not this escape from a fate worse than death (namely, being nibbled by sharks) was a press agent stunt, such as having jewels stolen or being born in a log cabin.

The answer is, of course not.

The Nassau effort was much too corny to have been dreamed up by a press agent.

Any press agent worth his commission would realize the stunt was so unbelievable no newspaper or wire service would go for it.

That is why what happened to the prominent Hollywood figure must have actually HAPPENED, and accidentally, at that, because no press agent would wait a minute.

Unless the press agent figured the stunt was so corny nobody would think it a stunt.

I wish I had not been asked to give my opinion. But I will state, flatly, that the only thing slicker than a good press agent is two press agents.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

The P & O Orient cruise ship Canberra has run into heavy weather in the Pacific, and her arrival in B.C. waters will be delayed about five hours.

Originally scheduled to arrive off Dallas Road, between 5 and 6 p.m. Sunday, she is now expected about 10 p.m., inbound for Vancouver.

The city's new tickets for parking meter violations will not be used for another 10 days, Ald. Michael Griffin said Friday.

The new tickets will give violators a choice of paying a $1 fine within three days or appearing in court.

At present they are given two days to pay $1 in advance. If they fail, the fine that would normally be imposed by the court, $2.50, can be paid in advance to avoid a court appearance.

Administrative details have to be cleared before the new tickets come into use, the alderman said.

"Decorate now" is the message Jaycees were spreading today to local businesses in an effort to spruce up the downtown for centennial festivities. Blue and gold decorations are available at three outlets only. The Junior Chamber will provide this information and encourage use of them.

Wenda Fisher, 1855 Simpson Road, Saanichton, was elected president of the first B.C. 4-H Rabbit Club at an annual meeting held recently.

Other officers elected were: Louise Peden, vice-president; Pat Buxton, secretary; Reid Fisher, treasurer; Ruth Thullier, telephone convenor; Robert Irving, refreshment; Paula Norman, publicity.

The club's next meeting will be held on Feb. 23.

Dr. Batten was born in England and educated at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland and University of Manchester.

He came to Victoria on a fellowship, "and I liked it so well I decided to stay permanently."

VANCOUVER (CP)—An explosion ripped through a room in a downtown rooming house early today, sending one man to hospital with severe burns. Robert Litterer, 58, was reported in fair condition in hospital.

Fat Pay Cheque Due

WASHINGTON (AP)—Francis Gary Powers, the U-2 pilot, apparently will find a lot of money awaiting him on his return from Russian captivity. Powers testified at his Moscow spy trial that his contract called for $2,500 a month, or $30,000 a year. He did not make clear with whom he had the contract, but after his arrest he was identified as a Lockheed Aircraft Corporation test pilot assigned to the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It is now more than 21 months since Powers' plane came down in Russia. Twenty-one months at $2,500 a month is $52,500.

ALGONA, Iowa (AP)—When Gwen Egel and James Kildow were married here almost everything went awry. At a wedding rehearsal last Saturday night the bride's party was an hour late. Monday was the wedding day. Kildow thought he had plenty of time to get a haircut and Miss Egel planned to line up a photographer. The barbershop and the photographer studio were closed. Finally a barber and photographer were rounded up, dim his car lights properly.

Rangers Snap Chicago Streak

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers snapped Chicago's winning streak at six games by defeating the Black Hawks 2-1 today on Earl Ingarfield's goal at 9:13 of the third period. The National Hockey League game in Madison Square Garden drew a capacity crowd of 15,925. The Rangers also scored the first goal of the game. Johnny Wilson beating Chicago goalie Glenn Hall at 8:15 of the opening period. This lead lasted for 10 minutes. Eric Nesterenko tied the count 1-1 for the Black Hawks. Ingarfield beat Hall with a hard, 20-foot drive into the left corner of the net. Hall slowed the puck with his glove, but it trickled over the line as the goalie fell backwards.

the trio said today. Paul Egle, Pan-American Airline executive, said the gunman covered him and fraud manager Laurence Kingston, 34, with a gun and said: "What would you do to let me out of here without following me?"

Egle said Detective Short replied: "We won't follow you."

A second later Egle said he heard the gunman say: "What are you doing?" Then shooting started. When it was over, Short and Kingston lay fatally shot and the man with the gun had run from the room holding an abdominal gunshot wound. Egle was wounded in the thigh.

The man police identified as Eric Lifton, 21, of Lake Monomack, N.H., was captured outside the hotel after forcing a police constable into a taxi. The policeman fought and overpowered him to end the affray Friday.

TWO COUNTS

Lifton, in hospital, was charged with two counts of capital murder.

Egle said he followed Short and Kingston to the man's room in connection with an airline credit card investigation. When he entered, the detective was questioning the man.

"It was a very calm discussion then," Egle said.

The airline executive said he went to make a telephone call when Short "took me by the arm and said 'the guy's got a gun.'"

"I turned around and he sure did have a gun and it was pointing right at me. He seemed nervous but there was no expression at all on his face."

"He pointed the gun at his own temple and said 'I could do this, but I'd rather do it this way.'"

"Then he made us lie face down on the floor on one side of the room. He was standing about 15 feet from us."

It was at this point, Egle said, that the bargaining took place, followed by the gunman's sudden question, "What are you doing?"

"Then all hell broke loose ... I couldn't tell who started

GERMANS JAIL ENGINEER AS SOVIET SPY

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (Reuters)—The West German federal high court today sentenced Soviet engineer Valentin A. Pripolzev to four years hard labor on a charge of spying.

Pripolzev, 43, was employed by the Soviet trade mission in Cologne when he was arrested last August. He is the first Russian citizen tried by the high court.

He denied the charges after the court rejected his claim of diplomatic immunity when the trial began here Wednesday.

WIFE'S REACTION

'Too Excited, I Can't Sleep'

Times News Service
MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. — Mrs. Francis Gary Powers put in an excited, pre-dawn call to her hairdresser today when she learned her husband had been released from a Soviet prison.

"He's on his way. I can't sleep," she enthused. "I'm too excited."

The big white-frame house that Barbara Powers has rented here since her husband's imprisonment became a beehive of activity shortly after word of the pilot's release was flashed around the world.

The hairdresser, who refused to give her name, wheeled up to the house at the first light of dawn and made several additional trips back and forth to town during the course of the morning.

On one occasion she returned carrying a pile of women's clothing in dry-cleaning bags. At Norton, Va., Powers' father said: "We're just tickled to death."

Only two days earlier, Mrs. Powers had disclosed that her husband said there was no hope for his early release.

She said her husband wrote that Soviet officials had told him there was no hope for clemency or parole because of the "seriousness and gravity of his crime."

Powers Traded For Soviet Spy

BERLIN (AP)—U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers was exchanged today for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel in a hush-hush operation on a Berlin bridge.

Soon afterward Powers flew off to Washington.

Informed sources said the exchange was held up for about 20 minutes while a check was made to confirm the release of a second American in the exchange—Frederic L. Pryor, 28-year-old economics student held by the East Germans.

Then the exchange of Powers for Abel was made in the centre of Glienicke Bridge in the Berlin suburb of Wannsee.

In Washington, the White House announced Powers was due in the U.S. capital either today or Sunday but said the place and time will not be disclosed.

SEE FAMILY FIRST

Press secretary Pierre Salinger advised reporters they would not be given an opportunity to interview the spy plane pilot for 10 days or two weeks. This is to give Powers an opportunity to see his family and be interviewed by government officials, Salinger said.

He added in response to questions, that there is no charge against Powers and he is not in custody.

Powers had been held by the Russians since his high-flying reconnaissance plane crashed deep in the Soviet Union on May Day in 1960. He was sentenced the following Aug. 19 to 10 years confinement for espionage.

Abel, a colonel in the Soviet intelligence service, was sentenced to 30 years in 1957.

Pryor, who had been held since he vanished on a visit to East Berlin Aug. 23, was released at checkpoint Charlie, the K.S. crossing point in West Berlin.

Informed sources gave this account of the secret exchange of Powers for Abel:

Just before 8 a.m. about 10 Americans arrived at Glienicke Bridge. They rode in German-made cars bearing licence plates issued to private cars of U.S. civilians in Germany. It was just before dawn.

'Desire To Improve Relations'

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union said today one of the reasons U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers was released was a desire to improve relations with the United States.

A brief announcement on Moscow radio also said Powers had been released in response to pleas from his relatives.

It said the decision to release Powers, sentenced to a 10-year term Aug. 19, 1960, was made by the presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

The announcement made no mention of Col. Rudolf Abel, the Soviet spy who was exchanged for Powers.

The Americans wore civilian clothes and overcoats. In the group, apparently, was Abel.

LINE DIVIDES BORDER

Financial Giants Fight For Power Corp. Control

A battle for financial control of the British Columbia Power Corporation is shaping up in the stock markets of Eastern Canada, it was reported in business circles there today.

In what was described as the largest single deal ever traded on a stock exchange in Canada, a Toronto group acquired $1,600,000 of B.C. Power shares (100,000 at $16).

The group is headed by E. B. Kernaghan, president of Thomson, Kernaghan and Company, a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Sources on Bay Street—the Toronto financial centre—are quoted as saying Mr. Kernaghan's group is seeking control of the company because it is dissatisfied with the way B.C. Power management has handled the firm's affairs since the B.C. government expropriated the B.C. Electric Company, its chief subsidiary, last August.

The group is said to feel it could work out a better arrangement for B.C. Power shareholders if it could sit down and bargain with Premier Bennett.

Under the takeover scheme, the government paid B.C. Power $111,000,000 for all the common shares of B.C. Electric.

It then offered, at the company's option, to buy the rest of B.C. Power's assets at a figure which would bring the whole settlement to $38 on the old B.C. Power shares, a figure they were trading at early last year.

Meantime, B.C. Power distributed part of the money it received from the government to its shareholders in December at a figure of $18.50 per share.

The reduced shares have been trading in the $15 to $16 range since that time.

In addition to the big trade Friday, B.C. Power has been a top trader at Toronto for more than a week, with the price edging up slightly from $15.50 mark to a close of $16 1/4 Friday. This may have indicated other heavy buying by the group seeking control.

To acquire control it is said the new group would have to acquire more shares than the Power Corporation of Canada, a holding and management company which at June 30 last held $7,800,000 worth of B.C. Power shares.

Friday's 100,000 share block represents about 2.1 per cent of B.C. Power's 4,772,011 outstanding shares. But it represents also about one-fifth as much as Power Corporation of Canada's holdings.

While B.C. Power still has a considerable period in which to exercise its option with the government to complete the sale at $38 per share, its line of action has been to launch a strong campaign against the takeover method and seek an arbitration in the courts. It claims the company's assets are worth some $50,000,000

THIS DAY IN VICTORIA - 1862

FEBRUARY 10

The steamer Emily Harris, on her way here from Port Moody, in Burrard's Inlet, last night suffered damage to her propeller and put into Cordova Bay, near Cedar Hill, under sail. There were 90 passengers aboard. Thirteen of these elected to walk from Cordova Bay into town, leaving at 8 p.m. and reaching here at 11 p.m.

The steamer itself and the remaining passengers made port under steam and sail early today.

Three minor cases were dealt with in police court; a white man accused of breaking things in a saloon was dismissed for lack of evidence; the second, a drunken St. Louis, was fined $1.25; the third, a colored man accused of selling liquor to Indians, was bound over under bond.

A sailor from HMS Topaze was sent to the chain gang for 28 days for a breach of discipline aboard ship.

Forum on Cancer For Women Only

British Columbia's pioneering cytology laboratory for early detection of cancer of the cervix will be explained at a free forum for women only in the Odeon Theatre on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There will be no reserved seats. The theatre will be filled on a first come, first served basis.

A film, "Time and Two Women," will be shown. It will present the vital message that, by means of a simple annual examination, cervix cancer can be virtually eliminated.

After the film there will be a question and answer period with a panel of four doctors taking part: Dr. H. K. Fidler, Vancouver, specialist in pathology and bacteriology; Dr. David Boyes, Vancouver, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology; Dr. Arthur B. Nash, Victoria, specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology, and Dr. D. B. Roxburgh, specialist in pathology and bacteriology.

The forum is sponsored by The Victoria Times and B.C. Cancer Institute.

Figures just released by Dr. Fidler, who is director of the cytology laboratory at the institute, show that the uterine tests taken from nearly 85,000 women during a recent 12-month period resulted in detection of 217 proven cases of early carcinoma of the cervix.

Figures are based on a 12-month period ending Sept. 30, 1961, since it requires some four months to verify preliminary findings.

Discovered at this stage, cancer of the cervix is almost 100 per cent curable. At later stages, it is only about 50 per cent curable.

Fast Action by Province On Lost Logging Tax Take

Premier Bennett Friday, in general terms of the over-aimed at making Ottawa bear all tax sharing agreement. Although legislation to allow the province to share in the loss of logging tax revenue was passed at last August's special session, final details of the agreement had not then been arranged. The new bill has no changes in principle, but follows the final federal agreement with minor technical changes.

The agreement allows logging operators to deduct from income taxes the amount they pay in special provincial logging tax.

Ottawa's plan is that it would bear two-thirds of the income tax loss; and the provincial government one-third. However, the premier pointed out that B.C. is to receive only 18 per cent of the corporation income tax levied by Ottawa.

Under the Ottawa plan Mr. Bennett said B.C. must bear half the loss in logging tax revenue.

So he introduced a special Act to Offset Levies Under the Logging Tax Act.

It is subject to agreement from the federal government and could be enforced by issuing a proclamation at any date through the cabinet.

"I'm sure they'll agree," the premier confidently told reporters.

Mr. Bennett also introduced a bill to the legislature revis-
